Rome Accused and Denies Blame; Refuses Indemnity.

Il Duce May Snub Anti-Pirate Parley

The Mediterranean Crisis.

Russia blamed Italy for the torpedoing of two Soviet ships in the Mediterranean and demanded indemnity. Italy at once denied responsibility and sharply refused the Russian demands. A rupture of diplomatic relations appeared a possibility.

Boycott by Italy of the conference called for Friday by Britain and France to review the Mediterranean situation seemed likely. Germany was reported planning to ask a postponement of the conference. Russia, whose fleet is no match for that of Italy, called on France and Britain to halt submarine attacks in the Mediterranean.

Reds Accuse Italy.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Sept. 6.—Russia accused Italy tonight of torpedoing two Soviet ships in the Mediterranean. Italy at once denied blame and sharply refused Russian demands for indemnity.

The Italian action, in effect, appeared to be Premier Mussolini's challenge of Russia's right to discuss Mediterranean affairs.

Two direct and immediate developments seemed likely:

1. Italy may not participate in the conference called for September 10 by Britain and France to review the Mediterranean situation, particularly as it concerns the safety of merchant shipping which frequently has been molested by unidentified submarines and warships in recent weeks.

2. Italy and Russia might break off diplomatic relations.

The Italian press minister today issued a statement reciting that the Russian charge d'affaires had handed to Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano a protest over torpedoing of the two ships, coupled with Soviet demands for indemnity and punishment of the guilty. The ships were not named, but the Timiryazev and the Blageov are the most recent of Russian ships sunk in the Mediterranean.

Count Ciano's disdainful reply stated that "Italy denies this responsibility, even as it rejects en bloc the demands of Soviet Russia."

The diplomatic impasse was the latest and one of the most serious springing from the civil war in Spain, and from sympathy by European nations for one side or the other—(Italy and Germany for the insurgents, Russia and France for the Madrid-Valencia republic).

Authoritative quarters said that Italy had been planning to accept the British invitation to the forthcoming Mediterranean conference, but highly informed sources said today that it seems certain that the decision will be to stay away from the conference.

Russia Looks to Britain.

Moscow, Sept. 6 (AP).—Soviet Russia gave no clew tonight to her future course of action in regard to the Italian denial of the Soviet charge that Italy was to blame for the sinking of two Russian ships in the Mediterranean.

The official press, however, indicated that Russia looks to Britain and France to take some positive initiative in the forthcoming "anti-piracy" conference to safeguard neutral shipping in the Mediterranean. One paper said: "The time for pompous conferences, elegant assemblies and sundry committees has passed; the time has come for the ostrich policy of France and England to end."

Germany Asks Delay.

Paris (Tuesday), Sept. 7 (U.P.).—Germany will ask postponement of the conference of Mediterranean powers, scheduled for this Friday, until after the Nazi party congress

Green Fears Fascism; Neutral NLRB Vowed

A. F. L. Head Assails Lewis for Seeking 'Dictatorship' Through Sit-Downs; Madden Blames Lawyers for Strike.

Because a mustachioed New York carpenter, Peter J. McGuire, had the bright idea back in 1882 that workingmen ought to have a long week-end once a year these things happened yesterday—Labor Day, 1937:

John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, told a Pittsburgh mass meeting that "Eugene Grace and his puppet, Tom Girdler, of Republic Steel Corporation, will not long flout the law in America."—Page 4.

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins warned the Nation failure to provide for older workers, thrust aside for younger men, "threatens our social structure."—Page 4.

Green Fears Fascism.

By the Associated Press.

Dallas, Tex., Sept. 6.—William Green, A. F. L. president, rallied his Southwestern forces against a campaign by the C. I. O. today with a bitter denunciation of that organization's "destructive policy" in splitting organized labor.

The C. I. O., he told a mass meeting of federation members at the Pan-American Exposition, further promotes this policy by subordinating the welfare of workers to personal political ambitions, by sponsoring sit-down strikes, and by encouraging communistic support.

Green brought his battle against the John L. Lewis organization to Texas several months after the C. I. O. started an intensive campaign to organize oil field workers.

C. I. O. rallies were scheduled for late in the day at Fort Worth and Houston.

Not only does the C. I. O. "welcome communistic support and use communistic methods," but its sit-down strikes are illegal and "are likely to pave the way to a Fascist dictatorship," Green told the workers. Many of them had heard him flay Lewis Saturday night for the C. I. O. chief's attack on President Roosevelt.

Neutrality Pledged.

Asking the public to be patient with the operation of the Wagner labor relations act, Chairman J. Warren Madden, of the National Labor Relations Board, yesterday vowed to preserve strict neutrality in the current division in the labor movement.

Madden spoke in a Nation-wide radio broadcast last night in making the board's first public answer to the barrage of criticism directed at it since long before the Supreme Court upheld the labor relations act's constitutionality last spring.

He traced the roots of some public disapproval of the board to a brief prepared by 57 Liberty League lawyers before the case went to the court in which the lawyers advised the Nation's employers the act was 100 per cent unconstitutional.

Blames Lawyer for Strike.

He said: "As I recall their legal score, it was perfect—a perfect zero. I cannot recall a single piece of advice which they gave in the course of a 60-page brief that was right.

"But the fact that all they said and wrote turned out to be wrong did not prevent it from having a very serious effect.

"It helped to incite a volume of resistance to the law which would never have occurred had the normal legal doctrine been followed."

Soviet Punishes 6 for Reveling In Horse Meat

Tashkent Officials Accused of Using City's Funds in Debauchery.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Sept. 6.—The Soviet "purge" today caught six officials at Tashkent, capital of the Uzbek Republic in the heart of Asia, on charges of squandering the city's funds on wild drinking debauches with girls from a "rest home."

The Communist Party organ, Pravda, called the Tashkent officials "Bourgeois Nationalists" and accused them even of slaughtering the municipality's horses to provide meat for their revels. Pravda said the six were eliminated in a clean-up," but did not specify their fate.

The nation-wide campaign against enemies of the regime went on with no sign of abatement.

Already 29 of them have been executed in Leningrad Province and in Georgia as accused traitors. Two score others are on trial in the Ukraine, Khirgizia, Azov-Black Sea area, Siberia and the Caucasus.

Ten officials in the Ordjonikidze region of the Caucasus, convicted of anti-Soviet plotting among the peasants, were sentenced to death.

Lazar Kaganovich, new commissar for heavy industry, shook up the whole Soviet coal administration today in a drastic effort to overcome a production shortage.

Halt War Race, Buy Materials, Geneva Urges

By the United Press.

Geneva, Sept. 6.—The raw materials committee of the League of Nations, rejecting the contention of Germany, Italy and Japan that they need colonies for basic industrial products, told them bluntly tonight they could buy all the raw materials they need if they stopped their feverish armament race.

The committee embodied its declaration in a report summarizing a year of intense investigation of what many say is the chief problem underlying world unrest.

It warned the three powers that only by halting arms expenditures and reducing their trade barriers could they hope to overcome their raw material difficulties.

Behind the warning was implied the fear that, now that Italy has conquered Ethiopia and Japan again is invading North China, Germany—loudest in her demands for colonies—may take advantage of the existing confusion to strike.

The report, which will be submitted to the Assembly opening September 13, thus indirectly indorses United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull's appeal for reduction in armaments and trade barriers.

T.N.T. Made From Gasoline Adequate for U.S. War Supply

By the Associated Press.

Rochester, N. Y., Sept. 6.—Discovery of a process to convert gasoline into the totuol which makes T. N. T. in quantities enough to supply the United States' entire needs for this explosive in war-time was reported to the American Chemical Society here today.

The gasoline T. N. T. was discovered by Dr. Aristide von Grosse, of the Universal Oil Products Co., Chicago, and described by Dr. Gustav Egloff of that company.

Dr. Egloff said that no other country knows how to convert its "gas" into high explosive. Although the chemists were told today the precise changes made in gasoline to get T. N. T., the "catalyst" that does it is a secret. The catalyst is a chemical, different from gasoline, which when mixed with gas makes the conversion.

Michigan gasoline, said Dr. Egloff, is richest in the T. N. T. makings. But East Texas offers the big supply, because of its great volume of petroleum. Enough hydrocarbons could be extracted from thee East Texas gasolines, he estimated, to supply 150,000,000 pounds of toluol a day. If necessary this one American oil field, he added, could supply the present toluol needs of the entire world.

Nation Pays 391 Lives for Its Holiday

Toll Sets New Record for Labor Lay Week-End Mishaps.

D. C. Escapes Accidents After 10 Die Friday and Saturday.

The Nation paid 391 lives for the last of the summer holidays, a new accident record for Labor Day week-end.

Motor mishaps killed 11 in Washington and vicinity Friday and Saturday but yesterday saw a sudden respite, despite rain which greased highways in the late afternoon.

The eleventh holiday victim was James Wyatt Owens, 21, of 1478 Clifton street northwest, who died in Leesburg, Va., from injuries received in an auto crash near there Saturday night. He was an employe of the Procurement Division of the Treasury Department.

Of the total, 280 died in automobile crashes; 50 drowned and 61 died in other accidents. Only 271 were killed last year.

The sloop, Wee One, owned by Harold A. Young, of Baltimore, was reported missing but landed safely at Tilghman's Island, Md., last night.

Seven Rescued.

Near Ocean City, Md., a Coast Guard lifeboat rescued five persons from the 75-foot yacht Felice. The Felice, finally located eight miles off-shore, was disabler. Its sail down and its boom broken.

Seven men were taken from the boat Ida Atwater, found by the Coast Guard cutter Champlain disabled off Atlantic City, N. J.

Off Gibson Island, Md., the two-masted auxiliary schooner Aloha was dragged to safety by the Coast Guard cutter Apache after she had gone aground. None was hurt.

Only a few minor accidents occurred in the District yesterday as police put extra highway patrols on much traveled streets.

Martha Ruuti, 31, and Arvo Bertowitz, 28, both of Monesson, Pa., were killed in a collision on the National highway about 15 miles from Hagerstown, Md., late yesterday. Three other persons, Mary Bertowitz 58; Arno Rutie, 68, and Edward Troute, of Hagerstown, a passenger in the other car, was seriously injured.

Forecast for today is about the same as the past two days—"mostly cloudy, slightly rising temperature with possibly occasional rains." Warmest temperature yesterday was 65 at 4:30.

Six deaths were attributed to plane crashes. Four persons drowned near Clayton, N. Mex., when a cloudburst trapped them in their automobile in an arroyo.

Others Injured.

Three auto casualties were taken to Montgomery County General Hospital. They were William Burriss, 32, Potomac, Md., fractured arm; Edgar Kisner, 50, Norbeck, Md., cut on leg, and Ernest Kisner, 24, cuts and bruises. Their car overturned rounding a curve a half-mile from Glenmont, Md.

Herman Meyer, 32, 1843 A street southeast, and Clyde Reese, 22, 1332 South Carolina avenue southeast, were slightly injured when their cars collided at Fourteenth and A streets southeast.

Clarence H. Steiner, 21, Riverdale, Md., suffered a foot injury when he was thrown from the rear seat of a motorcycle when it crashed with an auto. Dorothy Jones, 20, 523 Twenty-first street northwest, Katherine Tapscott, 15, 629 Newton place northwest, and John Wells, 18, 609½ Newton place northwest, suffered minor traffic injuries.

Mrs. Helen Crosby and Theodore Mang, both of Washington, were injured in a three-car collision on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard. Mrs. Crosby, a passenger in one car, received a possible skull fracture and Mang, driver of another car, was believed to have a fractured nose and knee.

Japan Pays $240 For Invasion of American's Home

Peiping, Sept. 6 (AP).—The Japanese embassy announced today Gene Lamb, American writer, had been paid 800 Chinese dollars ($240) as reparation for the invasion and plundering of his compound in the western hills by Japanese soldiers.

American-Loyalist Slain.

Denies Full Proof Of Responsibility

Evades Reply to Query if Note 'Insulted' Nippon's Navy.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

Tokyo (Tuesday), Sept. 7.—Reliable Japanese reports said today Foreign Minister Koki Hirota has rejected for the present the three demands of the British government because of the shooting of Sir Hughe Knatchbull-Hugessen, British Ambassador to China, allegedly by a Japanese military aviator.

Hirota handed the Japanese government reply to British Ambassador Sir Robert L. Craigie last night. It was understood he expressed regret for Sir Hughe's injury, but made no mention of the three British demands, explaining that the investigation of the incident by the Japanese army and navy commanders in Shanghai still was incomplete.

Britain Silent.

Britain, in her formal protest dated August 29, demanded formal apology, suitable punishment for those responsible for the attack, and assurance that measures will be taken to prevent a recurrence of such events.

The British Embassy transmitted the reply to London, but would not comment on its contents. Diplomats believed Britain would continue to insist that her demands be met and would not interpret Hirota's statements as a final rejection.

"Insult to Japan" Questioned.

The foreign minister was questioned about the reply in Parliament last night and was asked whether he considered the British demands "an insult to the Japanese navy."

He replied that so far there is no tangible proof that the attacking airplane was Japanese and said that the government will announce its attitude when Rear Admiral Kiyoshi Hasegawa and Lieut. Gen. Iwane Matsui have completed their investigations at Shanghai.

Both Hirota and Rear Admiral Mitsumasa Yonai, navy minister, said it was unthinkable that Japanese aviators intentionally would commit such an attack.

Frantic Americans Beg Advice on How To Get Out of China

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

Shanghai (Tuesday), Sept. 7.—Americans made frantic by President Roosevelt's statement that United States nationals declining to leave China remain there at their own risk today besieged officials with anxious inquiries as to where they can turn for protection.

A United States Marine officer said all Marines stationed here had been ordered to have their dependents ready for compulsory departure aboard American warships, possibly later today.

The American Consulate pleaded for Americans to go to Hiachow, on the coast 200 miles north of here, whence they can be taken out of the country.

Japanese Strategy in New Offensive

Chinese Await Attack by 70,000; Ground Held 5 Days.

Japanese Move In From Three Sides

Reinforcements Landing From Transports Off Woosung.

BULLETIN

Shanghai, Sept. 7 (AP).—The Chinese army abandoned the defensive today and counter-charged with desperate fury at the Japanese lines fringing the Yangtze and Whangpoo rivers on the northern Shanghai battle front.

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Tuesday), Sept. 7.—The devastated and corpse-strewn battleground north of Shanghai was pulverized by hundreds of bursting naval shells and aerial bombs today to prepare the way for an infantry advance on the stubborn Chinese defense lines which are resisting to the death.

The area around Kiangwan, five miles north, and the civic center bore the brunt of the bombardment by the third Japanese battle fleet and three flights of bombing planes for the second successive day, indicating the Chinese have not given ground before one of the most furious bombardments of modern warfare.

Seventy thousand crack Japanese home troops moved on Shanghai from three sides. Reinforcements were being landed from transports off Woosung at the junction of the Yangtze and Whangpoo rivers.

Simultaneously Japanese airplanes rained death on 250,000 more Chinese soldiers along the 100-mile secondary Chinese line to the west of this city, established for the defense of the Chinese capital of Nanking.

Both sides admitted casualties running into the thousands.

The Japanese said they captured the important town of Paoshan at 10 a. m. yesterday.

Chinese Battalion Slaughtered.

Infantrymen scaled the walls with ladders and slaughtered the Chinese battalion which has been isolated there for five days.

The Japanese were driving forward against desperate Chinese resistance in five sectors. They said one of their columns fighting toward Woosung, down river port of Shanghai, had captured the isolated Chinese positions in the Lion Forest and its adjacent forts.

At 2 a. m. today the whole countryside west and northwest of the Anglo-American area in Shanghai's International Settlement was aflame.

The Chinese said they were counter-attacking around Paoshan and that a squadron of their airplanes from Nanking had bombed Japanese destroyers and troop transports off the village of Hsiaochuansha, near Liuho.

The Japanese were attempting to land reinforcements at Liuho to aid their column in the Lotien sector, which is attempting to reach the Nanziang Railway station 10 miles west of Shanghai and cut one of the Chinese communication lines.

Two Ships Reported Afire.

The Chinese claimed their bombs hit two Japanese ships, which were ablaze.

Chinese Commander Gen. Chang Chih-chung said there was bitter hand-to-hand fighting a mile from Paoshan at midnight. He had no confirmation of reports the Chinese had recaptured the city. These reports were that a Chinese dare-to-die detachment, concealed in cellars when the Japanese took Paoshan yesterday, emerged during darkness

Kling Is First In Plane Race By One Length

Illinois Flier Dives Across Finish Line, Wins $9,000 Prize.

By the United Press.

Kling, winner of yesterday's Greve Trophy dash, averaged 256.910 miles per hour in nosing out Earl Ortman, of Los Angeles, Calif., whose average was 256.858. The race was a bitter disappointment to Col. Roscoe Turner and S. J. Wittman, veteran air hawks, who dominated the field until final stages.

Wittman, lean, bespectacled Oshkosh, Wis., pilot, hung up the fastest time in the 1937 races when he whipped his aluminum-nosed red monoplane around the pylons at 275 miles per hour in a qualifying dash.

He led the field today until the eighteenth 10-mile lap, when a bent propeller and an oil-spitting motor forced him back to a fifth-place finish.

When Wittman fell back, Turner, who had dogged his tail throughout, roared into a commanding lead. Ortman was second, Kling third, Frank Sinclair, of Farmingdale, N. Y., fourth.

In that position they bored around the pylons on the eighteenth and nineteenth laps. Rounding the second post on the last lap, Turner thought he cut inside the pylon. He turned back, rounded the pylon, and in doing so fell into third place.

As Ortman and Kling banked around the final pylon for the stretch dash, it appeared that Ortman had won. Kling had an altitude advantage and he dived full-throttle across the finish line in front of the 100,000 in the stands.

"I didn't know I had won—I was gunning her for all she could do," Kling said, a broad grin on his grime-smeared face.

Kling's winner's share was $9,000.

Martin Retires From District Appeals Court

Chief Justice's Action Creates Second Vacancy in Two Months.

Chief Justice Martin, still hearty at 80, informed the President he wished to exercise his retirement privilege, for which he became eligible at 70.

"I have worked pretty hard for 60 years," the kindly justice said yesterday at his home at 1661 Crescent place, "and now I think the time has come to rest. I'm going to stay in Washington and enjoy life now that my work is done."

The chief justice comes from a long line of lawyers who began practice in Ohio in 1840. He is the last of the line connected with the bar, his son having died in 1930.

Two months ago Associate Justice Josiah A. Van Orsdel died, creating the first vacancy on the United States Court of Appeals bench here in a long time. His place was taken by Justin Miller, a young attorney with the Federal Board of Tax Appeals.

Oklahoma City, Sept. 6 (AP).—Senator Elmer Thomas said today he would recommend Fletcher Riley, justice of the State supreme court, for appointment on the United States Court of Appeals in the District of Columbia to succeed Chief Justice George Irving Martin.

Egyptian King Gives $50,000 to His Fiancee

5 U. S. Generals Sherman, Lee Make All-Star Fighting Team; Near Top; Washington Ignored

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 6.—An Army officer picks an all-time, all-star, world-wide squad of military commanders—and such great marshals as Washington, Pershing, Grant, Genghis Khan and Alexander the Great aren't even on the second team.

But among the 24 honored in the first-string fighting lineup are five Americans, two who plotted the rival strategy in the War Between the States, Sherman and Lee.

Assuming the usual pick-your-own-if-you-don't-like-mine attitude of the sports page all-America football selectors, Lieut. Col. George L. Simpson, Field Artillery, N. G. U. S., publishes his all-stars in the current issue of the Infantry Journal.

The head man of this super-soldiery named by Simpson as "an all-time corps command and staff" is Frederick the Great, who took a bunch of Prussians and, through the seven years' war, built 'em into a major power while handcuffing the rest of the (European) league.

Napoleon and Wellington, the rivals at Waterloo, are bracketed in the somewhat subordinate classification of division commanders—Napoleon of the first division, Wellington of the second. "But," Simpson hedges, "I am the first to admit that they missed the three-star job by merely a hair."

Bankhead Accuses Federal 'Theorists' of Attempting to Reduce Cotton Prices

Alabaman Says Loan Aimed to Repel Farmers

By the Associated Press.

Jasper, Ala., Sept. 6.—Government "theorists" were charged by Senator Bankhead (Dem.), Alabama, today with a "deliberate effort" to lower cotton prices, while Southern farm groups hunted a way to bolster growers' returns from the staple.

Bankhead, disappointed that the Federal price-pegging plan offered loans of only 9 cents instead of 10 cents a ponud on cotton and that adjustment payments will be made only on 65 per cent of base production, urged farmers to put their cotton in a holding pool financed by the Government 9-cent loans to await better prices.

"The loan plan," he charged, "was worked out by departmental theorists to accomplish two definite objectives: First, to reduce the price so as to bring about larger exports of cotton; second, to make the loan so unattractive that few farmers would put cotton under a Government loan."

New Move Reported.

A spokesman for Secretary of Agriculture Wallace in Washington replied with the assertion that the sole purpose of the loan-subsidy program was "to increase the income of the cotton farmer."

"Loans," the spokesman added, "were made low enough to allow cotton to move freely in trade. We have found that when loans are fixed too high the Government accumulates cotton, exports are reduced and more harm than good results."

From Memphis, meanwhile, came reports that a plan was afoot to form an organization in which New York brokers and Southern planters would be aligned in the cotton country's fight to regain world cotton markets. The Commercial Appeal said Col. Lawrence Westbrook, adviser to the Association of Southern Agricultural Commissioners which met there Saturday, confirmed the report.

Revision Is Demanded.

At a meeting this week-end, the commissioners adopted resolutions demanding parity payments on all this year's predicted crop of more than 15,000,000 bales and a revision of the loan plan.

From other sections of the South where the economic barometer responds to cash in cotton planters' pockets, voices were raised against the Government decision against loans of 10 cents or above and failure to cover the entire base production with subsidy payments.

North Barbour County, Ala., farmers by resolution expressed "disappointment" with the Government plan. Drafted by a committee headed by Donald Comer, textile manufacturer, the rsolution asked protection "by tariff" against "the billion pounds of jute that comes into this country nanually substituting for 2,000,000 bales of our own cotton.

Politics and People

President's Labor Day Statement Is Prelude to Industrial Arbitration Move.

By Franklyn Waltman

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S Labor Day statement was regarded in political circles here as forecasting an effort toward a new era in American labor relations, and for that reason it should be taken as one of the politically most significant developments in recent days.

There can be no doubt that the thorny problem which centers around organized labor constitutes a political issue loaded with dynamite. Observers returning from visits around the country report that Mr. Roosevelt's silence and inaction regarding the sit-down strikes and other John L. Lewis activities did the President far more harm than his Supreme Court plan.

WALTMAN

The United States is a middle-class Nation and its people by and large abhor industrial strife. They want to see the workingman get a fair break. They have no sympathy with terroristic labor tactics and they fear marching mobs. The country rapidly was going sour on the President until he uttered his "plague o' both your houses" comment. That expressed how the country felt and Mr. Roosevelt knew it.

Thus in his Labor Day statement, Mr. Roosevelt, despite Mr. Lewis' condemnation of his impartiality, asserted that "both sides have made mistakes." But the maintenance of his neutrality in labor controversies was not the high point of that statement.

The significant phrases were those which stated that "the conference table must eventually take the place of the strike" and that "those of us who are in the Government and those whom Government serves must all do their part by placing at the service of capital and labor the necessary machinery to facilitate the adjustment of disputes and thereby eliminate the need for strikes and interference with the flow of wages and commerce."

In those words Mr. Roosevelt commeneed to prepare the country for his next major move in the field of labor relations, namely, a system for arbitration and conciliation in the big industries along the lines of the railway labor act. It may not reach fruition in the next session of Congress, but that is the objective to which Mr. Roosevelt has decided to move.

Experimentation toward that through the National Labor Relations Board. This agency handles only controversies growing out of the efforts of workers to organize for purposes of collective bargaining. Moreover, it has a law, upheld by the Supreme Court, to enforce its decisions.

But the work of that board is laying a foundation for the adjustment of industrial disputes by orderly administrative processes. Employers in increasing number are looking to the board to arbitrate differences which arise with employes. Thus in the first six months of this year 1,160 cases coming before regional offices of the N. L. R. B., involving 283,769 workers, were closed by agreements reached between employers and employes through the mediation of the agency's officers.

This at first glance may not seem a large number of cases. But it was not until after the Supreme Court upheld the validity of the Labor Relations act that this process of conciliation really got under way. For instance in January there were only 78 such cases, 64 in February and 91 in March. But in June there were 468 cases involving 107,705 workers closed by agreement.

In the matter of labor news it is only the spectacular events which receive attention. The front pages tell about the strikes which are called. Few, outside of those involved, hear about the strikes averted. In June, for instance, the N. L. R. B. averted 70 strikes involving 34,331 workers and settled 100 strikes involving 26,891 workers.

Each of these incidents is a contribution to the building up of peace machinery for the adjustment of industrial disputes. Such machinery remains far from perfect. The progress is gradual, even slow. The jurisdiction of the board is strictly limited. For those reasons organized labor has been impatient. And yet for a country as individualistic as this, where the average employer has deeply ingrained in him the belief that it is his business and his alone how he runs his factory, it is a record of real progress.

But if the findings of Washington observers who have been traveling around the country are accurate and if the polls of public sentiment are correct, this is the direction in which the American people want to go. Along the road toward arbitration of labor disputes they will go with the President.

It is for this reason that the opinion around Washington is that Mr. Lewis helped rather than hurt the President in the former's speech denouncing Mr. Roosevelt's effort at impartiality. The feeling is that the country does not wish a Federal Government that is an ally of organized labor, though it has no objection to one sympathetic to the aims of labor.

And talk of a third party emerging from a split between the President and Mr. Lewis is put down among the keenest political observers as the result of wishful thinking. In the first place, the President and Mr. Lewis have not split. They have been just criticizing each other. The C. I. O. leader is engaged in an effort to bluff Mr. Roosevelt.

But as indicated by his Labor Day statement, Mr. Roosevelt refuses to be bluffed. He knows, as well as Mr. Lewis, that the latter has no place to go, should he wish to desert the New Deal. He cannot return to his old political home, the Republican Party. Third parties just do not work. John Lewis is smart enough to know that should he lead a third party movement in 1940 the result in all probability would be the election of the Republican candidate.

The President's explanation that the objective of his proposed trip to the Pacific Coast is intake rather than output—that is, that he wants to sound out public sentiment instead of seeking to formulate it at this time—indicates that he has taken the advice of several of his more hard-headed, politically-minded counselors. They believe that before he undertakes any vendettas against those who opposed him on the Supreme Court issue, he should rub shoulders with the man on Main Street.

Ship Mail Pacts Are Approved By Cummings

24 Lines Settled $7,600,000 Contracts for About $4,600,000.

Attorney General Homer S. Cummings has approved settlements thus far reached by the Maritime Commission with ship operators, the commission announced yesterday.

The commission said during the six months covered by the contracts approved by Cummings "the operators will receive a subsidy approximately 60 per cent of the mail subsidy which they would have received had the contracts not been terminated, or $4,600,000 as contrasted with approximately $7,600,000."

The agreements were reached in accordance with the merchant marine act of 1936, which directed termination of the old sea mail subsidy arrangements on June 30, 1937, and their replacement by the new system.

The commission said "24 companies holding 33 of 43 ocean mail contracts" terminated by the act were involved in the settlements approved by Cummings, and continued:

"The Attorney General's decision not to appeal from the commission's settlements finally terminates all differences between the Government and the contractors involved. There remain for adjustment by the commission only the contracts of the Dollar group, the Munson Line, the United Fruit Co. and the American Line. The commission is continuing negotiations with these companies and settlement with the Dollar group and the Munson Line is expected within a few days.

"The claims of the 24 contractors with whomsettlements were effected by the commission exceeded $75,000,000, and were settled at a net cost to the Government of less than $935,000.

"The contractors in question were American Scantic Lines, Inc., of New York. American Diamond Lines, Inc., of New York. American South African Line, Inc., of New York. American West African Line, Inc., of New York and New Orleans. Atlantic & Caribbean Steam Navigation Co., of New York. Baltimore Mail Steamship Co., of Baltimore, Md. Colombian Steamship Co., Inc., of New York. Eastern Steamship Lines, Inc., of New York and Boston. Export Steamship Corporation, of New York. Grace interests: Gulf Pacific Mail Line, Ltd., of San Francisco. Lykes interests; Mississippi Shipping Co., Inc., of New Orleans. New York & Cuba Mail Steamship Co., of New York. Oceanic & Oriental Navigation Co., of San Francisco and Los Angeles. Oceanic Steamship Co., of San Francisco. Pacific Argentine Brazil Line, Inc., of San Francisco and Los Angeles. South Atlantic Steamship Co., of Savannah, Ga. States Steamship Co., of Portland, Oreg. United States Lines, Inc., of New York. Waterman Steamship Corporation, of Mobile, Ala."

Copeland Assails Lewis for 'Using Labor as Vehicle'

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—Senator Royal S. Copeland tonight issued a Labor Day statement from his mayoralty campaign headquarters declaring he is "bitterly opposed to the efforts of John L. Lewis and others who use labor merely as a vehicle."

"To my mind," he said, "the most impertinent statement I ever heard was that from the pen of John L. Lewis when, referring to the President of the United States, he said in effect, that 'one who has supped in the house of labor' must do so and so.

"I shall admire the spunk of the President if he retorts in language unmistakable. . . . It is shameful that the individual units making up the rank and file of labor, and the wives and children who suffer when there is no pay envelope. . . . should be exploited to further the personal ambition of John L. Lewis."

Appeal to Franco, President Asked

The United States Government yesterday was asked to do "everything possible to prevent the mass murder of 2,000 civilians in Santander," which recently was captured by Gen. Franco, Spanish insurgent leader.

The appeal was contained in a telegram to the President signed by the North American Committee to Aid Spanish Democracy.

"Although we insist no recognition be given the Franco regime, we urge our Government demand Franco desist from such barbaric treatment of civilians and prisoners, which shocks the conscience of the civilized world and is contrary to all the principles of international law," the telegram stated.

bracket, besides Lee and Sherman, are Stonewall Jackson, Winfield (Fuss and Feathers) Scott and Gen. J. G. Harbord.

The "Fighting Parson" of this outfit is none other than Mohammed, who stirred piety with the sword.

Here's the top lineup with Simpson's salty observations, in the manner of the all-America selectors, on their aptitudes for their jobs:

Commanding general—Frederick the Great—"Never kidded himself into believing he could conquer Russia as Napoleon did."

Chief of staff—Alfred, Graf von Schlieffen—"Would work more harmoniously with the great Frederick than any other all-timer."

G-1—(Personnel)—Helmuth Carl Bernhard, Graf von Moltke . . . "Could be depended upon to give good advice."

G-3—(Operations)—Pierre de Bourcet . . . "Disciplined, creative mind."

G-4—(Supply)—William Tecumseh Sherman . . . "If you do not believe this soldier's every movement showed his first consideration was logistics, take a trip to Georgia and speak with the old-timers."

Mohammed Is Chieftain.

Inspector—Jacques Antoine Hippolyte, Comte D. Guibert . . . "An inspiration to those inspected rather than an arouser of red wrath in the breasts of the underlings."

Judge advocate—Armand Augustin Louis, Marquis de Caulaincourt . . . "Proved that he can plead a cause."

Chaplain—Mohammed . . . "While I duck the flying missiles and avoid as best I may the wrath to come, I give you as our fightingest parson: Mohammed."

Red Knight Air Chief.

Engineer—Erich von Ludendorff . . . "In the last war the Germans were the cleverest in the operation of railways, the canny use of mines and demolitions and regulation of traffic."

Signal officer—Public Cornlius Scipio Africanus Major . . . "There was a soldier who had good communications several centuries before the telegraph, the telephone and the radio."

Ordnanace Officer — Gustavus Adolphus . . . "It would be hard to gainsay his ability to recognize the value of new weapons at once."

Commanding General, attached cavalry division—Oliver Cromwell . . . "He above all others was unhampered by tradition and had initiative and capability to spare. For subordinate commanders of the horsed regiments I allot Ashby, T. E. Lawrence and Forrest; the mechanized regiment goes to Jeb Stuart."

Commanding general, first division—Napoleon Bonaparte.

Commanding general, second division—Arthur Wellesley, Duke of Wellington.

Hannibal Heads Division.

Considered in the light of a post-bellum appraisal of Civil War strategians, the South, with Stuart, Forrest, Jackson and Lee mentioned, wins four to one over the North, which landed only Sherman on the all-star roster.

Moreover, Lee was considered for the head man job, and might have won it if he hadn't acquired a reputation for self-effacing courtesy.

"The South will send no orchids for this choice," Simpson writes, "for to them Lee is the greatest general of all time."

New London, Conn., Sept. 6 (AP).—President Roosevelt started back to Poughkeepsie, N. Y., today with enough bass to feed the crew of his yacht Potomac.

In the lee of the island he and his companions cast lines from the Potomac's stern. In the first hour they caught 36 striped bass.

Said La Pasionaria: "When I tell you how the other countries have abandoned Spain it is necessary to omit one country, the U. S. S. R. . . . U. S. Strike Handling Outmoded, Editor From Australia Asserts

Yet Admirer of America Finds Capital Near to His Ideal.

An Australian newspaperman, who knows every word of the "Star-Spangled Banner" and whose grandfather was a captain in the Union Army, wandered into the office last night and declared Washington seemed to be an embodiment of the principles "that you licked us for 150 years ago."

The Australian, Frederic E. Baume, is editor of the Sydney Sunday Sun. He is 37 years old, author of three novels and has the clipped sort of British accent that delights American maidens.

Baume has been in the United States for about four months, traveling around and buying features for his paper. He was in Mexico for a while, where he visited Leon Trotzky.

An expert on industrial relations, Baume declared the United States 30 years behind Australia in its methods of handling disputes between capital and labor. There is no violence in Australian strikes, he said, and there is not the "hysteria" which he thinks exists here.

Baume admitted Washington had a great historical significance for him. It meant George Washington and the Revolution, old battles and early statecraft, he said.

Baume believes his admiration for America may be inherited because his grandfather, Charles Leary, came over here from Australia during the Civil War and fought through the conflict with the Ninth New Jersey Infantry. He emerged with the rank of captain.

Nazi Congress Becomes German-Italian Military Pageant

Fascist Powers Proclaim Unity In Joint Flight

By the United Press.

Nurnberg, Germany, Sept. 6.—The Nazi Party congress developed tonight into a mass demonstration of German and Italian military might with the arrival of a squadron of Italian fighting planes.

The Italian planes, flying in formation above Nurnberg under the command of Gen. Porro, were greeted enthusiastically by German air force officials.

Their arrival to participate in the congress, always restricted before to annual declaration of Nazi Party principles, proclaimed that the congress had evolved into a show of Italo-German collaboration.

Air Force Is Keynote.

Military preparedness admittedly was the keynote of the entire congress, rather than inauguration of national socialist reforms. An official of the Nazi Party pointed to 250 German bombers and pursuit planes flying low over the city when he was asked to describe the dominant feature of the gathering.

"That will be it—our splendid new air force and army," he said, proudly.

Hitler Flies to Fete.

Hitler arrived in Nurnberg by airplane at 4 p. m. today and was driven to his hotel from the airport through streets bedecked with bunting and swastikas and crowded with thousands of cheering Gemans held back by cordons of Nazi Storm Troopers.

Hitler received chief party leaders and government officials. Diplomats from numerous South American countries, from insurgent Spain, Italy, Poland and Turkey were on hand, but the envoys of the United States, Great Britain and France will not arrive until later in the week.

(A one-day visit by Prentiss B. Gilbert, the American charge d'affaires, has received full sanction of the State Department, despite objections from United States Ambassador William E. Dodd, who is in the United States.)

Russia and Italy May Break Over 2 Ship Sinkings

now in progress at Nurnberg, it was reported here tonight. Berlin was understood to have suggested that the powers delay the meeting until September 19. At the same time it was reported that Poland, Norway and Holland have requested permission to send representatives to the conference.

Boycott May Be Serious.

London, Sept. 6 (AP).—British plans to effect a united European front against submarine piracy in the Mediterranean were considered seriously impaired tonight by the Italo-Soviet diplomatic clash over the sinking of two Russian ships.

The British foreign office anxiously waited to learn what effect the clash would have on the decisions of Germany and Italy to attend or not attend the forthcoming "anti-piracy" conference outside of Geneva.

As Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain hastened to London to complete preparations for the conference, informed quarters predicted the sessions would be barren of results if the two Fascist states boycotted the meeting.

English Labor Demands New Foreign Policy

By the Associated Press.

Norwich, England, Sept. 6.—British labor fired its opening salvo today in a campaign against the national government.

An attack on British foreign policy at the first session of the sixty-ninth Trades Union Congress here set off what was expected to be a drive for 100,000 new Labor Party members before the annual Labor Party Conference at Bournemouth October 4.

A major conflict apparently was developing within labor ranks, however, over Britain's $7,500,000,000 rearmament program. The National Council of Labor and the Labor Party executive committee approved rearmament until the international situation appears less warlike.

The Amalgamated Engineering Union, with a resolution against rearmament on the agenda, publicly dissented.

Delegates representing 214 unions with more than 4,000,000 members heard Ernest Bevin, secretary of the Transport and General Workers' Union, speaking as president of the congress, condemn militarism as a cost of tangled international affairs.

He warned, referring to the wars in Ethiopia, Spain and China, that "public consciousness has been awakened by such horrors and may result in a demand upon our government to cease its feeble action in these matters."

The Engineering Union resolution accused the British government of "repeatedly demonstrating its sympathy to the Fascist powers."

"This congress condemns the government's arms program," it said, "and declares that the main danger of war arises from the aggressive war aims of the Fascist powers. . . .

"Therefore, we call for a struggle to force the early resignation of the national government and its early replacement by a Labor government which would defend peace and democracy."

Russia Has Little Naval Force For Use in Submarine Hunt

Her Few Vessels Constructed Before or During World War; Italy, However, Has Three Times Its Tonnage and It Is Modern.

By the Associated Press.

Soviet Russia has little naval force with which to enforce safety of her shipping in the Mediterranean, where it has been menaced by "pirate" attacks, an outgrowth of the Spanish civil war.

Her naval fleet is composed mostly of vessels constructed during or before the World War, so far as is known, and a considerable number of submarines. Russia's naval force, too, is intended chiefly for the Pacific, the Baltic, the Black, Caspian and White seas.

The Russian navy, listed from unofficial sources by the League of Nations armaments yearbook, as of 1935:

Four capital ships, launched in 1911; 7 cruisers, the latest completed in 1932; 35 destroyers, including mine-layers; 26 to 60 submarines (a fleet of unknown strength is believed stationed at Vladivostok); 60 gunboats, mine-sweepers, training ships, etc. Total tonnage upward of 198,148.

The Russian government announced last October, however, that a program to make the Soviet Union a great sea power was to be effected.

Italy, Great Britain and France have the following listed naval strength:

Italy: Last month launched two 35,000-ton modern battleships. Naval force includes 4 other battleships, 1 aircraft carrier, 25 cruisers, 103 to 118 destroyers, torpedo boats, ets.; 62 to 73 submarines, 182 miscellaneous gunboats, training ships, and 149 harbor service craft. Total tonnage upward of 529,127.

Britain: Twelve battleships and 3 battle cruisers, 6 aircraft carriers, 48 cruisers, 18 flotilla leaders, 145 destroyers, 52 submarines. Total tonnage upward of 1,246,990.

France: Nine battleships, 4 building; 1 aircraft carrier, 1 aircraft tender, 14 cruisers, 60 destroyers and torpedo boats, 72 submarines. Total tonnage upward of 704,438.

Chinese soldiers disguised as refugee peasants filtered through the Japanese lines during the night and shot down officers on Japanese warships bombarding the Chinese lines from their anchorages in the Whangpoo River.

Naval Officers Shot.

Capt. Ono, chief engineer officer of the Japanese flagship Idzumo, and Commander Nakamura, senior staff officer of the Third Battle Fleet, both were shot while the Idzumo was anchored off Jukong wharf bombarding the Chinese lines in the western part of the Yangtzepoo area of the International Settlement.

Chief developments of the last 24 hours were:

1. Japanese warships seized two Chinese customs cruisers either in or very close to territorial waters of the British crown colony of Hongkong in South China and apparently had blockaded the great Chinese commercial city of Canton, on which Hongkong depends for its trade. The action additionally angered Britons and intensified the Anglo-Japanese enmity which has been at a dangerous point since the shooting of the British ambassador to China by a Japanese military aviator.

British Protest Rejected.

2. In Tokyo Japan handed the British Embassy her reply to the British note protesting against the shooting of the British ambassador here and rejected temporarily Britain's demand for satisfaction on the ground that it has not yet been established definitely that a Japanese pilot fired the shot. The Japanese Parliament approved the government's conduct of the war and was to vote huge military appropriations for its continuance today.

3. In Nanking the Chinese foreign office announced it will appeal to the League of Nations against Japanese aggression. The government rejected the demands of the United States, Britain and France for simultaneous Japanese and Chinese withdrawals here to eliminate danger to some 2,000 Americans and thousands of other Occidentals in the Anglo-American area of the International Settlement and the French Concession.

Five-Year Defense Supported.

4. Earl Leaf, United Press war correspondent, reached Shanghai after a month with Chinese armies north of the Yangtze River and reported China is prepared for a five-year war, with the peasant population supporting the government and the army. He discovered that the leaders of the great Chinese Communist army, Gens. Mao Tse-Tung and Chu Teh, who are allies of Nanking, discussing Chinese strategy, The Japanese army's great drive toward Shantung Province, southward from the big Japanese base in Tientsin, was progressing slowly. Soviet Russia, spent a week in and the Chinese admitted they had suffered heavy casualties.

The fighting around Shanghai continued the bitterest and most spectacular of the war. Observers believed the result of the battle which has raged in the city since August 12 may be the turning point in the entire conflict.

Loyalists Seize 600 Prisoners, Clear Belchite

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Sept. 6.—Surrender of 600 insurgent soldiers besieged in Belchite Cathedral was reported today in a Spanish government communique from that war-torn town on the Aragon front.

The government claimed capture of the cathedral gave its forces complete control of Belchite, strategic point 20 miles south of Zaragoza along the line of insurgent communications with Teruel.

The 600 who surrendered were imprisoned while 1,700 insurgent dead were gathered up from battlefields around the cathedral, the communique said.

In northwest Spain disorganized Asturian troops were described in insurgent dispatches as being in full flight before Gen. Franco's army, storming westward along the Bay of Biscay toward Gijon.

The insurgents captured Llanes, port town 25 miles east of Gijon, and paused there only long enough to round up 5,000 surrendering government soldiers.

They pushed on in their campaign to conquer Gijon and the remainder of Asturias province—last fragment of government-held territory in northwest Spain.

NLRB Head Reveals How Lawyers Were Fooled on Labor Act Constitutionality

Outlines Work Of His Board Since Inception

Cites Legal Entanglements New Law Faced in Early Days.

Excerpts from an address on the national labor relations act by J. Warren Madden, chairman, National Labor Relations Board, yesterday:

The fundamental and far-reaching objectives of the law made it necessary that it be tested in litigation in the Supreme Court of the United States. But before any case had come before the board, a large committee of lawyers which included many prominent ones, published a brief gratuitously advising the country that this act was not the law. I cannot recall that any single piece of advice which they gave in the course of a 60-page brief was right. As I recall their legal score it was perfect—a perfect zero. But the fact that all that they said and wrote turned out to be wrong did not prevent it from having a very serious effect. It helped to incite a volume of resistance to the law which would never have occurred had the normal legal doctrine been followed, that an act of the Congress is presumed to be Constitutional until the courts have decided to the contrary. A large proportion of the employers against whom the board proceeded applied for injunctions to halt the proceedings at the threshold, before even a word of testimony had been taken as to the merits of the cases. The United States marshal honored the board with almost daily visits, to serve papers upon the members charging them with being trespassers and intermeddlers and seeking to enjoin them from doing what they were appointed to do.

The board's lawyers succeeded in winning practically all of these cases, but in many of them the course of the litigation was long and wearisome, and by the time the board had extricated itself from these legal entanglements and went back to pick up the merits of the case, nothing recognizable remained of the situation. Although the higher courts never had any difficulty with this injunction question, it took many decisions by them to stop this flood of injunction suits, with its complete waste of time and money.

"Orders Openly Disobeyed."

It was physically impossible for the board, with its small legal staff and its limited budget, to pursue such a proceeding in any large number of cases. The consequence was open disobedience of the orders of the board. The board was in the meantime carrying five cases, testing different applications of the act, through to the Supreme Court.

During the past winter several ruinous industrial conflicts occurred. The workers struck without even coming to the board. In one case it was estimated that the strike cost the employes in wages, the employer in profits, and the communities in loss of business, $30,000,000. The issue which caused the strike, as reported in the newspapers, was that the union, admitted by the employer to have an overwhelming majority of the employes as members, demanded recognition as the sole collective bargaining agency. The act entitles such a union to such recognition. The employer flatly refused. He was, no doubt, advised by his lawyer that the act was not the law. The lawyer was wrong. By his advice he caused an $80,000,000 strike.

In another great strike of the past winter, the background was this. The union had filed charges with the board that the company had discharged its members in order to cripple the union. The union, by coming to the board, showed that it was willing to resort to orderly legal processes. The company, however, obtained an injunction against the holding of a hearing to take testimony as to the truth of these charges, and though the board made every effort to free itself, succeeded in keeping the injunction in force for several months. In the meantime the union, conceiving itself to have new grievances against the employer, and knowing that the employer regarded the law as a nullity and would not comply with it, did not again resort to the board, but imitated the employer in ignoring the law and calling a strike.

On April 12 of this year the Supreme Court of the United States decided five cases upholding the act and the extent of the jurisdiction which the board had asserted in those cases. And so at last the law of the statute book became the law of the land.

Self Government Experience.

And it is difficult to estimate the total good to the community and to the country which is resulting from the union meetings themselves. Hundreds of thousands of citizens are gaining an experience in self government which is incomparably superior to the usual efforts at adult education. They are on the way to find out the difference between bunk and reality, to distinguish between crooked leaders and straight leaders, to judge among those who are too rash and impetuous, on the one hand, or too timid and do-nothing, on the other. After some experience of this kind, we will have here, I venture to predict, a backlog of hardheaded realists who will be extraordinarily hard to mislead, and before whom the old time politician with his easy cures for the ills of mankind will beat his breast in vain.

In other communities the new freedom for the worker is not being accepted without resistance. Employers and organized and unorganized busybodies are trying to prevent their workers and their communities from having the benefits of this law. Vigilantism has cropped up and groups of strong men show their loyalty to the ideals of their communities by kidnaping single union organizers, male or female, and violently running them out. This must be a passing phase, a silly season, and these communities must discover before they damage themselves too seriously, that this kind of lynch law is too crude for modern America.

Green Says A. F. L. Established Democratic Policy in Dealings

The American Federation of Labor established a standard for democracy and democratic procedure in the administration of its affairs and in the contemplation of questions of national and international import. It was the true spokesman for the laboring people in the United States and Canada on such matters.

Two years ago a minority group which could not force or compel the majority in a convention to accept its will formed a dual organization of labor. They called themselves the Committee for Industrial Organization. They, and they alone, are responsible for the division which has been created within the organized labor movement of the North American continent. If there had been no Committee for Industrial Organization set up, there would be no division within the ranks of labor. We would be a united family.

The destructive policy pursued by those who composed this committee was manifested in the way in which it conducted it affairs. Based upon insubordination, it continued a policy of personal abuse, discord and denunciation. It introduced hate, enmity and bitterness into a movement where the principles of brotherhood, fraternalism and reciprocal sacrifice had always been accepted and practiced. In following this course they lost sight of the great issues involved and the ultimate good of the individual members and they saw only their personal gain and their determination to establish autocratic and dictatorial control.

In some instances units of organized labor which had functioned progressively during long periods of time were raided and destroyed. In ruthless fashion the property and funds of established American Federation of Labor unions were seized and diverted to the use of this destructive dual movement. No well-financed organization of hostile employers nor any combination of labor-hating corporations could have succeeded so well in the substitution of weakness through division for strength through unity. The Committee for Industrial Organization must be classified on the pages of the History of Labor as a perversion and contradiction of all the ethical standards which organized labor had created and observed.

This dual movement has been praised and supported by the spokesmen of the Communist Party. The representatives of this subversive movement have placed their stamp of approval upon the Committee for Industrial Organization. The correspondent of the Soviet official publication in Moscow, in a cable, stated:

The C. I. O. strike activities in the United States are described as a militant labor movement which the American Communist Party is energetically supporting . . . The Communist Party is taking a very active part in the work of uniting the workers of the basic branches of industry. It is helping to prepare direct mass strikes.'

Only ten days ago the candidate of the Communist Party for the Presidency of the United States in the last election declared: that he was 'thoroughly satisfied with the direction the C. I. O. is taking.' He said, 'When the labor movement generally is growing and prospering the Communist Party as part of the working class also grows and prospers.' 'We find,' he explained, 'that the developments in the C. I. O. have brought forward a leadership and policies which are on the whole quite satisfactory to the Communist Party and we have no special aims of our own that we need to press upon them. They are advancing the labor movement, that is all we want. So long as they do that we have no difference with them.'

In the organizing campaigns which have been carried on during the raiding, tearing processes which have been followed by the Committee for Industrial Organization, more than 250 known Communists have been employed as organizers. The influence of these organizers has been exerted in every community where they worked and has been reflected in the application of the destructive economic philosophy of the Communist Party. The support of the representatives of these subversive and destructive forces has never been rejected by the leaders of the Committee for Industrial Organization. The acceptance of expressions of approval, announced in the official publications of the Communist Party, and the employment of Communist organizers to lead and influence American laborers in industrial disputes is un-American and subversive to the ideals and teachings of the American labor movement.

This development creates the issue. It marks the difference between the American Federation of Labor and Committee for Industrial Organization. Whereas the one, the American Federation of Labor, spurns, rejects and disavows communism and communistic support, the other, the Committee for Industrial Organization, welcomes it, utilizes it and encourages the acceptance of its economic and industrial philosophy.

The American Federation of Labor will have nothing to do with communism, communistic teachings or communist philosophy. We stand now, as we have always stood, as a barrier to any advance which the Communists may seek to make within the ranks of labor. We combat this destructive force in the front line trenches of our social order. Never will the American Federation of Labor spend the dues collected from honest working men and women who love America and American institutions in the employment of Communists.

American working men and women who believe in collective bargaining, in co-operation and organization can make their choice.

The Committee for Industrial Organization developed a line of procedure in the conduct of strikes which immediately met with public condemnation and the opposition of public opinion. I refer to the sit-down strike as a form of industrial warfare. It has been made clear and definite that public opinion will never support the use and application of the sit-down strike in the settlement of disputes which arise between employers and employes. Because strikes can not be won without the support of public opinion the sit-down strike, if persisted in, will be outlawed by legislative enactment.

The right to strike must be preserved and protected as a part of democratic procedure and democratic administration. We cannot surrender this right. Labor must always be accorded the right to resist injustices and to strike for the redress of wrongs when the conditions of employment become intolerable and unbearable. This involves the right to refuse to work, to enlist the support of fellow-workers and friends in the conduct of a strike, to picket and boycott legally and to use all legal and lawful methods in the conduct of a strike.

But when property is illegally seized and held labor subjects itself to the charge of lawlessness and the destruction of property. That means that labor places itself outside the pale and protection of law and lawful procedure. It is then subject to the charge of attempting to secure the redress of economic and industrial wrongs through the use of illegal methods. Public opinion, which is the most powerful force in American life, turns against it.

The application of the sit-down strike on a wide national basis would pave the way not to the establishment of a communistic state but to a Fascist dictatorship.

During all the period which has intervened since the Committee for Industrial Organization was formed the executive council of the American Federation of Labor has discreetly and patiently pleaded for a conference for the purpose of healing the breach, uniting labor's forces and settling the differences. Our requests for such a meeting have been rejected and our invitation to meet and confer has been scornfully spurned.

Out of the economic turmoil which has developed from the policies pursued by the Committee for Industrial Organization has arisen a discussion of the legal and moral responsibilities of trade-unions in the negotiation and observance of contracts negotiated through collective bargaining and the incorporation of trade-unions. It has ever been the policy of the American Federation of Labor to negotiate wage agreements with employers, to sign them, to place behind them and the signatures attached thereto the honor and integrity of organized labor and to maintain inviolate all agreements thus negotiated. This is the position and attitude of the American Federation of Labor toward the sanctity of contracts.

I am pleased to re-assert, personally and officially, the determination of the American Federation of Labor to meet its obligations, to discharge its responsibilities, both in the negotiation and observance of wage agreements. We shall vigorously disavow any attempt of a local branch, anywhere, to set aside and violate agreements honorably negotiated through collective bargaining.

Except for the deplorable record of the Committee for Industrial Organization, the long and steady history of keeping obligations by unions might well be envied by other organizations.

The American Federation of Labor must stand unflinchingly against legislation providing for the incorporation of trade-unions. Such legislation would be undemocratic and unadaptable to the needs of labor unions insofar as internal organization and discipline is concerned. It would handicap bona fide trade-unions and would subject them to the continuous attacks of hostile groups and other bitter enemies."

Miss Perkins Reports Gains For Labor, Problem of Aged

Department Has Carried Out Its Mandate, Secretary Says, but Unemployment Menaces Thousands of Older Workers.

Excerpts from address of Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins yesterday:

The purpose of the Department of Labor as set forth in the statute "shall be to foster, promote and develop the welfare of the wage earners of the United States, to improve their working conditions and to advance their opportunities for profitable employment."

I can report on this fiftieth anniversary of Labor Day, observed by millions of Americans, that the mandate has been and is being carried out . . . Wages have risen, hours of work have been lowered, the child-labor evil has been curbed, safety devices and improved sanitary conditions have made the work places of the Nation, in most cases, models compared with those of earlier Labor Days . . .

But while these forward steps have been taken we have created a problem of the older workers in industry which has developed steadily over the past 15 years. As a State or Federal Labor department official over that period I have seen it grow until now it is a menace and terror to thousands of family breadwinners when they reach the age of 45 or 50. The problem was lost sight of during the depression when so many were out of work but it became more pressing than ever when recovery began and with the repoening of many plants older workers were not called back to their jobs, their places going to younger men and women . . .

I am able to report, as I have each Labor Day for five years now, that economic conditions have improved for workers and management over the year interval, thanks to President Roosevelt's policy designed to increase the purchasing power of wage earners and farmers. Its benefits have been shared by manufacturers, merchants, railroads, insurance companies, bankers and investors.

Green Says C. I. O. Seeking Fascism

They are not moved by a consuming ambition to establish themselves as political dictators."

Sunday night, in referring to Lewis, Green told a banquet of labor leaders:

"Shall we be ruled from the bottom up or from the top down by an individual who is governed only by a consuming ambition?"

Today he further emphasized his assertion that the American Federation of Labor stood ready to make peace with the C. I. O.

"During all the period which has intervened since the C. I. O. was formed the executive council of the American Federation of Labor has discreetly and patiently pleaded for a conference for the purpose of healing the breach, uniting labor's forces and settling the differences," Green said.

"Strikes," said Green, "cannot be won without the support of public opinion. The sit-down strike, if persisted in, will be outlawed by legislative enactment.

Gov. La Follette Sees New Party Lines in 1940

'Old Guard' of Both Factions to Face Progressives, He Asserts.

By the Associated Press.

Omaha, Nebr., Sept. 6.—Gov. Philip F. La Follette of Wisconsin predicted today the rise of a new national political alignment by 1940 from "the vitality and liberalism of the Middle West."

Speaking at a Labor Day celebration marking the fiftieth anniversary of the Omaha Central Labor Union, the Governor declared if American democracy is to live and function, "there must be a political realignment that will give the American people a real choice between progressive and reactionary government."

La Follette, titular head of Wisconsin's Progressive Party, said President Roosevelt was re-elected "by the largest majority in our history in 1936 because the people responded to his leadership and policies, which transcended old partisan lines.

"By next year in many States, and by 1940 in the Nation, the old guard of both parties will be on one side and the Progressives on the other."

La Follette paid tribute to Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, who was one of the closest friends of the Governor's father, the late Senator Robert M. La Follette, sr., of Wisconsin, saying:

"Senator Norris has done more than any other living person to advance the cause and promote the welfare of the average citizen."

C. I. O. Chieftain Recites Gains in Last Year, Predicts Girdler Surrender in Speech at Pittsburgh.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Sept. 6.—John L. Lewis, bushy-haired leader of the C. I. O., asserted at Pennsylvania's largest Labor Day rally that the workers will demand shorter hours, higher wages and greater voice in the councils of industry.

Lewis told a throng in Allegheny County's South Park, estimated at 250,000 by P. T. Fagan, of the United Mine Workers:

"Greater productivity must be governed by shortened hours of work and upon this depends our ecenomic well-being."

Neither by inference nor direct statement did the labor leader refer to his recent criticism of the Roosevelt Administration. He steered clear of political issues.

Workers and their families, crowded into the half-mile long grandstand, cheered for two minutes when Chairman Philip Murray of the steel workers' organizing committee introduced Lewis as "the man I regard as America's No. 1 citizen."

The militant C. I. O. chairman reviewed the history of labor, tracing the developments in industrial and labor relations. He asserted:

"Organized labor pioneers, who assumed great risks, builded better than they knew the foundation of the labor movement.

"A year ago we were met on all sides with industrial hypocrisy. On this Labor Day it is our privilege to give thanks to labor.

"Eugene Grace and his puppet (Tom) Girdler (president of Republic Steel Corporation), will not long flaunt the law in America. Last year there was no steel union. Today there are more than 500,000 in the Steel Workers Organizing Committee."

Today's labor celebration was the first in 50 years that has been officially recognized by major producers in the steel industry. Mill men gathered at the rally from the furnaces and rolls in plants with which the S. W. O. C. has signed contracts.

"Last year," Lewis continued, "there was no collective bargaining. Today there are signed contracts in the steel mills.

"Last year they worked 48 hours a week and got 43 cents an hour. Today they work 40 hours and get a $5 minimum."

Lewis read the roll of union men who, he said, had given their lives in the industrial conflict of the past year. When he had finished the list he declared:

"The long roll of labor's dead, faithful heroes; it was 160 dead in the fight against 'Little Steel.' No one else was sent to the hospital except the men of labor."

Of today's celebration, he said:

"Labor Day 1937 is unprecedented by the achievement of labor.

"There is but one point which I wish to emphasize. Labor's militant struggle will take its rightful place in history. There must be a crusade."

Earlier in an address before thousands of miners and mill men of the Kiskiminetas Valley at Leechburg, Lewis had warned that machines would increasingly replace men unless the workers organized.

Thoughtful men know that many of the aims and necessary methods of labor unions are very different today from those of the last generation. Labor organizations before and immediately after the World War was most effective in promoting the interests of skilled workers.

The main problem of organized labor during this period was to get the skilled wage earners to stand together, first, to compel employers to recognize and deal with their organizations, and then to drive as good a bargain as could be made.

But a great change has come over our national economy in recent years. There is still a need for mechanical skill and special training in large bodies of wage earners. On the other hand, there are today thousands of employments in which comparatively little skill and training are required; and we have had for many years a large body of unorganized labor of limited skill and little security of employment. So that now there are great numbers of men and women desperately in need of work and practically compelled to accept almost any sort of employment. Upon these defenseless people employers can draw when they oppose the demands of organized labor. But, at the same time, these masses of the less fortunate have become conscious of the fact that our modern industrial civilization can and should provide them with something more than a bare subsistence under the ever-present fear of unemployment.

So there has risen a clear need for a wider organization of wage earners; and a great opportunity has come to labor leaders to organize millions of workers hitherto unorganized.

Now, it is not my purpose today to make any argument about the relative merits of craft organization and industrial organization.

Men of common purposes will always disagree over the methods by which they strive for success. Men of strong convictions and exceptional ability will oppose each other, even when striving for the same result. But, under many leaders and through many different organizations labor in America has been steadily moving forward since 1933. If you would see where labor is going and how it is going to get there, you must look beyond the dust and turmoil raised by local and personal conflicts of the present hour. Then you will see more than those older regiments of labor that move by plan and command. You will see more than those newer surging masses that are impatient of control and uncertain of their direction. You will see in all this noisy, sweating confusion the mustering of a mighty army, already on the march, and on the way to greater and greater power in shaping the destiny of American life.

Organized labor is one of the major necessary forces in a democracy—one of the great agencies through which the people express themselves and shape the political and economic policies of a nation. When 130,000,000 people undertake to govern themselves, all big and little groups of citizens who have similar interest must be organized to express themselves through their chosen representatives.

So I believe today, as I have believed all my life, that in order to preserve our democracy and to distribute fairly the rewards of work there must be a practically universal organization of labor, which includes the organization of the farmers, the small businessmen and the "white collar workers" just as much as the organization of the industrial wage earners.

I belong to an old-established union—the union of the lawyers who have been fairly well organized for centuries to protect themselves and to help each other, just as the physicians, the bankers and many other professional groups have been organized, in the ways that seem best to them, to promote their common interests. I have never understood how such well-organized classes of society could logically oppose the organization of the unorganized.

The democratic idea, the real American idea, is that when men choose their own bosses they are free—and when bosses are chosen for them they are not free.

All the arguments against labor organizations are so feeble that today there are few people of intelligence and influence who openly oppose it. But there are a great many who want to see labor organized in the way that suits them, rather than in the way that suits labor. Such people are frequently heard protesting against workers being organized by force and against their will. Unhappily many employers who protest against the coercion of labor by labor organizers seem entirely willing to have labor coerced by employers. It may be wrong to force a man into a union by fear of his fellow workmen. But it seems to me to be at least as wrong to force a man out of a union by fear of his employer. Being a peaceful person, I do not like to see any man hit with a club, either on the head or in the breadbasket, and when a man is fired from a job he takes an awful wallop in the breadbasket!

Regardless, however, of differing methods of labor organization, and despite the persistence of an ancient opposition, we know today that the workers of the future will be largely organized. But, the problems that they must solve by concerted action will be very different from those of the past generation.

As more and more millions of workers are organized in the factories, in the mines, in the shops and in the fields; as the greater part of the worker-consumers of the Nation become organized and all are striving to get their fair share of the total products of our farms and factories, every labor organization will find itself deeply concerned with many more problems than wages, hours and working conditions.

You may remember that during the NRA and the AAA, when the farmers were being organized to get better prices for their crops, and the workers were being organized to get better wages and hours, and the businessmen were being organized to get better prices for their goods, a great wail arose about the consumer who was being asked to pay higher prices for everything; and between the organized groups bitter controversies arose.

Hostile critics like to say that we were trying "to lift ourselves by our bootstraps," because they could not see how everyone could be better off. They clung to the old theory that there was just so much in the pot of national income and that by dividing it up more fairly we could not increase the total that there was to divide.

Like many semiscientific criticisms, this one was half true and half false. Of course we cannot increase the national income simply by dividing it up in a different way. But it is a fact, which was proved again in the recent years of our recovery, that when we spread purchasing power we increase productive power. The only way permanently and largely to increase the average level of well-being is to increase the production and exchange of the essentials and ordinary comforts of life. We can't increase that national production unless we provide for increased distribution, for increased consumption, by constantly giving more and more purchasing power to more and more people.

You can easily imagine a country in which 10 per cent of the people own and control most of the wealth, and the great masses live in poverty. Such conditions have existed in many times, in many lands. And such conditions will continue, and even grow worse, so long as such a concentration and control of wealth is tolerated. But if you begin to force the 10 per cent of privileged people to distribute more and more of the wealth which flows into their hands, then more and more of the poverty-stricken 90 per cent will gain a purchasing power whereby more and more of the things which the 90 per cent need can be produced and sold, instead of more and more of the things which only 10 per cent desire and can buy.

Well-informed labor today knows that it is not the distribution of existing wealth, the mere dividing up of capital, which will give permanent gain to the masses of the workers. Well-informed labor today knows that it must help to speed up inevitable changes in our system of measuring the fair distribution of the rewards of work.

Labor is beginning to see that after its right of organization and collective bargaining has been fully established the struggle against a one-sided bargain must be carried on until human needs are given their just weight in the scales of economic justice. To achieve this high aim organized labor must have more than economic power. It must have the knowledge and the purpose to establish a political and economic system under which the dominant object of all industry and trade on the farms, in the factories, in the mines and the stores, shall be the production of the largest possible quantity of the common essentials and comforts of life which can be distributed to the largest possible number of people.

This is no easy task which lies before us. It demands more than a clear understanding of the immediate needs of the industrial wage earner. It demands an understanding by the leadership of every class of workers of the needs of every other class. It demands an understanding of what is fair compensation and a fair incentive in order to obtain the valuable services of those who are trained to organize and finance and direct the conduct of vast public and private enterprises. It demands an understanding of how to preserve the security and democracy of a system of private property, while at the same time preventing the abuses of property power and the unhealthy concentration of wealth under the control of a few. It demands more wisdom than any man or any small group of men can possess—the wisdom that can come only out of a multiude of counselors determining public policies by the composite judgment of genuine representatives of all classes and sections of our people.

Labor is on the march in America—not to a control of government in the interest of any one class of the people, but to the control of government and industry in the interest of all the people. This must be labor's goal, because as the masses of organized labor increase, so must increase the responsibility of the representatives of these millions for the welfare of all.

Labor in America is too well educated not to realize the value of the service which men trained in the organization and executive control of vast enterprises perform.

Labor in America is too well educated, too deeply interested in the freedom and security and sense of self-reliance which can be obtained by even the humblest worker in our economic and political system, to listen credulously to those who would break it down and attempt a sudden, vast experiment with some other form of government and industrial control.

All that labor in America is seeking today is to build a better structure on the same old sure foundations—a better structure of industry and trade in which men will still work for themselves, moved by individual ambition and the hope of individual reward, working for themselves and for their families, but at the same time understanding that in this independent modern world we must all work also for each other and serve each other if we are to serve our own best interests. It is toward this goal that I see labor on the march.

China Prepares For Long Siege, Writer Finds

5-Year Program Mapped; Northern Forces Sure of Victory.

(Earl Leaf, for three years manager of the United Press Bureau in Tientsin, has spent a month along almost the entire Chinese front, traveling from Tientsin southward through Hopei, touring strategic points in Shantung and arriving finally in Shanghai via Nanking, after one of the most strenuous assignments taken up by any correspondent in the Sino-Japanese War. His story, written on his arrival in Shanghai, follows.—Editor's note.)

By Earl Leaf.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

Shanghai, Sept. 6.—After a month of living, eating and sleeping in the war zone from Tientsin to Shanghai, talking with Chinese commanders and soldiers alike, I am convinced that China is preparing for a five-year war with Japan.

I believe, also, that China is fully aware of what that means and has prepared for it, with a realistic determination to settle once and for all the question of who will run China—the Japanese or Chinese.

The Chinese officers and men alike are not discouraged by temporary setbacks, which they insist are due entirely to the Chinese strategy based on prolongation of the war.

Strategy Outlined.

That strategy seems to be to wear the Japanese down, retreating when necessary into the maze of China's interior, where boggy lake country will clog Japan's highly mechanized columns, and slowly sap her military resources.

There is a startling contrast in the morale of the Chinese in the up-country war zones.

In the metropolitan centers, particularly Shanghai, their attitude has been summarized in these words:

"China is militarily weak, but we will resist Japanese aggression until the bitter end."

But in the northern and interior war zones, the Chinese soldiers are saying:

"Japan never will lick us!"

There civilians as well as soldiers—farmers and villagers—are digging trenches for the troops and harvesting their crops.

Fighting Savagely.

Chinese troops with inferior equipment—umbrellas instead of steel helmets to protect them from spraying shrapnel—and with practically no artillery, trench mortars or antiaircraft batteries, are fighting savagely against a powerful, mechanized Japanese army.

One puzzle to the neutral observer is the startling inefficiency of some of the Japanese offensive weapons. During three days and two nights in the Chinese trenches I watched the most intensive aerial bombing and artillery attack.

Yet, when it all quieted down, practically nothing had been accomplished.

Gen. Lieu Wen-tien, commanding the thirty-eighth division of the twenty-ninth route army, told me my sosjourn in the trenches had occurred during the most "serious" days of the Japanese offensive.

'Dictation' Is Assailed By Arkansas Candidate

Pocahontas, Ark., Sept. 6 (AP).—Representative John E. Miller, candidate for the United States Senate seat of the late Joseph T. Robinson, said today it was the duty of citizens "to select without dictation from any source those men and women whom we may desire to represent us in our governmental affairs."

In an address here he made no direct reference to his Senate candidacy in opposition to Gov. Carl E. Bailey, but mentioned "dictators," a subject stressed in the recent self-assembled convention which nominated him and repudiated Bailey.

Roosevelt Conference Manner Impresses Ace Rural Reporter

"Some say he is a good actor. If he is, he has it all over Sarah Bernhart, Clark Gable or Bob Taylor. Personally, I think he is just a good fellow."

Such was the impression of President Roosevelt carried back to residents of Lincoln County, Wyom., by Fin Petrie, prize-winning rural correspondent who visited Washington recently during a tour of the East.

Petrie, whose only news source back home is the store he runs, attended a presidential press conference while he was here, and used the incident as the lead story of his column in the weekly Kemmerer Gazette on his return. Secretary McIntire gave him a place "within four feet of the head of the Nation," he writes, "saying this place is for distinguished guests only. I had an idea that guy was a kidder himself."

Impressed by Hotel.

"The President sat behind a desk, behind him a couple of dicks, I think," he continues. "Questions shot at Roosevelt were answered quickly, cheerfully, and most of the time smilingly, but should the question call for a sharp return, he has it, and the honey contained in the answer rarely covers the sting."

After the conference Petrie shook hands with the President and discussed small-town journalism. "Asked if Argentine cattle hurt this particular neighborhood—and I told him, 'No.' Maybe that will be room for an argument if beef drops."

The hotel at which he and his wife stopped while in New York apparently impressed him more than did Times Square or the Empire State Building. From its roof "you can see ships soming in from the old country, that is providing you and the weather aren't hazy . . . While walking through parts of the hotel thought I was in the wrong joint and had got into a furniture store.

"In the bathroom you can get hot, cold or ice water—all out of the same faucet. The doors are all mirrors, and you can see how you look before and after taking a bath.

Covers Town of 40.

"The hotel management sent up a whole tubful of flowers, but I suppose they put that on the bill, just the same as store men used to do here years ago, when they gave a sheepherder a ham, and charged it as spuds."

The fireplace in their living room, he writes, "had a regular mantelpiece with grate and everything, and a bookcase full of books"—but not for long. Soon after their arrival, a liquor firm sent up a few samples, so Fin "threw the books in the grate and put the beverage in the bookcase. It looked better to me."

According to his editor, Petrie will need several columns to tell all that happened to him on his trip. In the meantime, however, he has to keep up with things in Opal, Wyo., the town with a population of 40 whose doings he records for the Gazette. So he closes his column with a local angle or two:

"Fishing on Greys River, Vic Faccinelli and Pete Petrie. One to take his mind off money, the other off bills. They took one fish pole and two fishing licenses. Neither one did them any good. The alibi, 'It snowed in the mountains.'

"Stock of overshoes, heavy suits, shovels and Prestone arriving. Another three weeks and it will be 'Shut the water off before you come to bed.'"

Britain Orders Protest Of Oil Tanker Seizure

London, Sept. 6 (U.P.).—The government has instructed its charge d'affaires at Hendaye on the Franco-Spanish frontier to protest "vigorously" to the Spanish nationalists against seizure of the British tanker Burlington, it was disclosed tonight.

The Burlington, carrying 7,700 tons of oil from Batum to Cartagena, Loyalist naval base, was captured by an insurgent cruiser Thursday off Palermo and taken to Palma de Majorca in the Balearics. The oil cargo was confiscated.

Boats to Seek Plane Reported Down in Lake

Point Pelee, Ont., Sept. 6 (AP).—Four boats stood by off Point Pelee in Lake Erie tonight awaiting calmer water that would permit a search for a red biplane reported to have crashed into the lake today, possibly with three persons aboard.

Building Work On Coulee Dam Is Year Ahead

Eight Trainloads of Cement and Gravel Poured Daily in Project.

Listing an entirely new set of construction records the Bureau of Reclamation yesterday pointed to the progress workmen are making on the gigantic Grand Coulee Dam that will block up the headwaters of the Columbia River in the eastern part of the State of Washington.

A trainload of cement and seven trainloads of sand and gravel are poured each day into the maws of giant mixers—a rate of operation which has placed construction more than a year ahead of schedule, said the Bureau. In fact, concrete has been manufactured and poured with such dispatch that a world's record made in the construction of Boulder Dam has been surpassed by 50 per cent.

Before the dam in the Columbia River was started the most concrete ever placed in a dam in one day was 10,642 cubic yards. Last May one day the Grand Coulee men poured 15,600 yards before they called it a day. That's not enough, however, and sometime this month they expect to set a new high of 17,000 cubic yards.

The dam gets about 95,000 barrels of cement a week—that means 60 carloads a day. Up to the first of the month more than 15,000 carloads were shipped to the construction scene—that's enough to load a train 142 miles long.

To make the huge quantities of concrete being handled at the dam a gravel pit as big as a Middle West farm is worked with enormous electric shovels delivering more than 30,000 cubic yards of sand and gravel to a washing and screening plant every day.

About 40 per cent of the pit output goes to waste as excess sand, and, as a result, a waste pile of 2,000,000 cubic yards of sand has accumulated. It takes nearly five miles of belt conveyors to handle this gravel.

With a two-minute mixing period, the eight mixers in the two plants produce uniform, high-strength concrete at the rate of a cubic yard in less than five seconds. A graph record of the weight of each component and of the consistency of each batch is made automatically.

Bride, Mother Slain; Mate Attempts Suicide

Memphis, Tenn., Sept. 6 (AP).—Mrs. Dolores Wamble, 30, bride of five months, and her mother, Mrs. R. H. O'Neal, 55, died today of gunshot wounds which, police said, were inflicted by Horace Wamble, 40, husband of the younger woman.

Wamble, salesman for a hair tonic firm, remained in a critical condition from injuries suffered when he plunged head-first from a second story window.

Suspected Fever Case Delays Liner in N. Y.

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—A suspected fever case held the Hamburg-American liner New York in quarantine nearly an hour today, ten days after the radio clearance privileges of the liner Hansa were revoked temporarily for failure to report illness aboard.

The New York did not ask medical clearance by radio today, but stopped in the Narrows for examination.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 5.—A 65-year-old man in a hospital here tonight was charged with murder in the slaying of Mrs. Jesse Chaperack, 35, known also as Mrs. Emma Jenkins, who was killed here last night by a .22 caliber bullet fired through a door.

Tony Setzer was the man held. His condition was serious. Police said the fatal shot was fired in a quarrel over the woman, and while Mrs. Chaperack pleaded for mercy.

Setzer was being treated for wounds inflicted, police reported, by Bert Frankenberry, 28, who accompanied Mrs. Chaperack to Setzer's home and severely beat him. Frankenberry is held as a witness.

Frankenberry, police said, had been attentive to Mrs. Chaperack while her husband was in jail on a non-support charge. Setzer also was attentive to the woman. He called at her home, finding Frankenberry there and went back to his own house.

They followed and were on the porch when Mrs. Chaperack was killed.

Prosecutor Charles G. Gain of Berkeley County declared last night an inquest would be postponed until he could round up more witnesses.

Setzer was quoted by police as saying the woman and Frankenberry had tried to break into his house. Neighbors told police the three had been drinking together earlier in the day.

Undertaker Won Motor Case, but Fears for Taximen

Undertaker W. W. Chambers was wondering last night whether District tax and traffic officials are going to try to enforce the motor-vehicle-for-hire law under which he was arrested last week.

Acting as his own attorney, Chambers won his case. The law does not apply to funeral directors, it was decided. But about the taxicab drivers?

If it applies to them there is going to be some fun around Washington, Chambers believes. The law states drivers of public conveyances have to stand within 5 feet of their vehicles at all times.

"It's part of the same old law they tried to enforce against me. Any taxicab driver who parks somewhere and goes in for a cup of coffee is due to be fined from $2 to $10, if the law is any good," said Chambers.

Five-Year-Old Girl Believed Murdered

Philadelphia, Sept. 6 (U.P.).—The body of 5-year-old Nancy Glenn, who had been missing several hours from her home, was found tonight on a desolate, vacant piece of land a mile from her home, face downward in a shallow pool of muddy water. Police expressed belief she had been slain.

Preliminary examination indicated the child had met death by asphyxiation, probably from drowning. A more complete examination was ordered to determine whether she had been attacked. The body was found under a pile of tin cans by the child's father, Joseph C. Glenn, an accountant.

John R. Sherman, J. N. Mendelson and Leo I. Sutterman, all of Chicago, were sentenced to five years in Federal prison. J. A. Ricebaum, also of Chicago, was sentenced to three years. Kopald-Quinn & Co. was fined $55,000, and Gould & Co. $10,000 by Judge Underwood. The Government charged the four convicted men were ringleaders in $5,000,000 Nation-wide stock fraud activities.

HOW LONG CAN A THREE-QUARTER WIFE HOLD HER HUSBAND?

YOU have to work at marriage to make a success of it. Men may be selfish, unsympathetic, but that's the way they're made and you might as well realize it.

When your back aches and your nerves scream, don't take it out on your husband. He can't possibly know how you feel.

Baker Shoots Employer Here After Pay Cut

John Acripreti, 65-year-old Italian baker, who lately suffered a pay cut, walked into Corby's Bakery, 2301 Georgia avenue northwest, yesterday and shot George F. Martin, 42, "boss" baker, in the abdomen, police said. At Garfield Hospital last night physicians held little hope for Martin's recovery.

Acripreti, who lives at 3215 Sixth street northwest surrendered to Tenth Precinct police, who said he admitted the shooting and held him on an open charge pending outcome of Martin's injuries. He was questioned last night by George Darnell, homicide squad chief.

Acripreti, said police, admitted shooting the baker because "he had something to do with the demotion." He was born in Napoli, Italy, and came here about 40 years ago.

"I'm sorry I don't speak better English," he said when questioned.

Mystery Blast Inquiry Begun At Arlington

Home Damaged Badly as Explosion Rocks Nearby Area.

Arlington County police and fire authorities last night were investigating the mysterious explosion that early yesterday damaged the two-story frame home of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Daniels, 414 South Edgewood street, Arlington, Va.

The blast, which shook the entire community, awoke several hundred residents of Arlington about 1:30 a. m. yesterday. A crowd watched the Cherrydale fire squad put out a fire that followed the explosion.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniels were spending the week-end at Colonial Beach. Daniels, who holds the contract for garbage and trash collection in Arlington County, returned yesterday afternoon to learn of the blast. He estimated the loss at $3,500.

Glass in first-story windows had been blown 25 feet. The kitchen door had been torn off, plastering on first-story walls loosened and weatherboards on the outside of the house spread apart.

Daniels and police officials last night said they had not determined the cause of the blast. They believed, however, the explosion was in the basement, where yesterday they said noticeable vapors still lurked.

Diphtheria cases reported totaled 21 for the week, against 22 last year; measles, 16 in each week; meningococcus meningitis cases, 4 against 2 last year; 2 infantile paralysis cases, against 5 a year ago; 3 scarlet fever cases, against 12, and typhoid fever cases, 20 against 19.

China Schools Closed Because of Fighting

Shanghai, Sept. 6 (A.P.).—The warfare between China and Japan kept schools closed throughout nearly all of China today, although normally this would have been the opening of the fall term.

In Shanghai foreign and Chinese education authorities alike, with hostilities ringing the city, decided the hazards of travel and of assembling large numbers of children in one place were too great for their 300,000 charges.

Torch Slayer In W. Va. Gets Sixty-Day Stay

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charleston, W. Va., Sept. 6.—William B. Read, Montgomery County (Md.) youth condemned to be hanged tomorrow for the torch slaying of W. Earle Dollman, received an additional 60-day stay of execution today from Gov. Holt.

The Governor said he had granted the reprieve to permit Read's attorneys to petition the State supreme court for a rehearing. The tribunal denied a review last Friday.

When captured last January in Vicksburg, Miss., Read, with two other men, War Joseph Kirby and Lawrence Gingell, was wanted on three charges, the Dollman slaying, the murder of Elwood Matthews, 65-year-old Montgomery County farmer, and a Federal Kidnaping charge.

The body of Dollman, Charleston salesman, was found in his burning auto near Sutton, W. Va., last Thanksgiving eve. He had been struck on the head with a pistol butt.

Matthews was found December 13 in Northwestern Branch near Burnt Mills, Md. He had been shot twice and robbed of $40. A confession by Kirby told how Read had supervised throwing the farmer into the icy waters of the creek with a rock tied around his neck. When the rope broke and Matthews came to the surface pleading for mercy, Read was said to have shot him twice.

Federal charges were lodged against the trio for the kidnaping of a colored Washington taxi driver, who was taken to Silver Spring, Md., and robbed on November 15.

The trio was brought to trial here for the Dollman slaying. Kirby and Gingell testified Read had been the actual slayer. Both pleaded guilty and were sentenced to 18 years' imprisonment. The jury found Read guilty without recommendation for mercy.

Undesirable Ambiguities.

In his Labor Day statement John L. Lewis declared it to be the duty of every American worker to join "the legitimate union of his own choice." For among the other advantages of labor organization to the worker, he continued, "it can make him articulate, so that he may participate in the government of his Nation."

Just what does the chairman of the C. I. O. mean by these words? Does he suggest that unless a worker joins a union he is unable to participate in national government? Does he conceive of government as nothing finer than the tool of organized interests, and does he intimate that only such organized interests have the right to determine national policy? If this were so, his reasoning would be not far removed from that which inspired the Fascist and Nazi movements. In their early days Mussolini and Hitler were only leaders of private armies, crusading for power with a promise to make "articulate" all who enlisted under their banners.

In our belief Mr. Lewis stops short of such totalitarian thoughts. Perhaps he is only following Mr. Roosevelt's emphasis on majority rule to the point where he seeks a well-organized support, including "every American worker," which will under the President's theory properly enable him to be dictatorial.

If that is the objective, members of the C. I. O. may certainly expect to "participate in the government" as a result of union membership, assuming that we continue to forget about minority rights. But if this be his argument, how does Mr. Lewis respond to the President's congratulatory note to the Government employes' unions which have properly agreed to forbid themselves the right to strike? Would Mr. Lewis agree that the rights of certain unions are strictly limited, regardless of their numbers?

It may be, alternatively, that Mr. Lewis merely visualizes the organized labor movement as an entirely constructive development of the mass-production age. The functions of the union, in this age, are certainly semi-governmental. In co-operation with employers it is able to improve working conditions and social outlook more effectively than can be accomplished by statute. In that sense, certainly, the responsible trade unionist is participating in government, even when his efforts lead to less governmental regulation.

It is probable that this last concept of trade unionism is the one which Mr. Lewis has in mind. His reference to the necessity of preserving democratic institutions confirms that estimate. But his statement was ambiguous. And this is the time when powerful leaders must be explicit in their addresses to their fellow citizens. A whisper in the Alps has been known to start an avalanche. Easily misunderstood exhortations, in the delicate balance of our civilization, could produce even more destructive consequences.

Passage Of A Star.

She was always spoken of in superlatives. Under her own steam, she rolled up more publicity than most stars with a super-salaried press agent. Then she started slipping and was assigned to small bit parts while younger rivals grabbed the headlines. Now she's a down-and-outer. In her heyday she made quite a splash but she was always a big eater, a vice which has written finis to more than one feminine career. She had, according to those who managed her, a voracious appetite for fuel. Her name is "Leviathan."

Recently a dispatch from Glasgow reported that "several British metal firms have their eyes on the old Leviathan, with the view of purchasing her for scrap iron." It is a melancholy prospect for the ship which was first the Kaiser's pride and which later herself transported 100,000 American soldiers to France to fight his armies. The anomaly didn't worry Leviathan, so long as she could be at sea. So it is a fair guess that she would prefer the blows of the ship-breaker to ending up as a floating hotel for visitors to the New York fair, as now alternatively proposed.

The Leviathan has played many roles. She was a German queen of the seas; an American transport; a post-war luxury liner, and for the past three years a lady of leisure lapped by the odorous tides of Hoboken. Her name appeared as often on the liability side of shipping ledgers as it did on sailing schedules. She will never come back. But all who love ships will hope that her ultimate destination is honorable extinction, rather than the protracted indignity of a tourist-lodging house.

Collective Action Revives.

There is importance in the meeting place, as well as the subject mater, of the international conference on submarine piracy which the British and French governments are calling at Geneva this week. The return to the seat of the League of Nations, of late so frequently ignored as a forum for international issues, is indicative of a growing emphasis on the policy of collective security.

The essence of the League system was a co-operative effort first to determine, then to isolate and finally, if necessary, to punish any government found responsible for illegal aggression. The underlying theory, amply substantiated by recent events, was that a blow to peace anywhere would menace not merely the victimized country but the whole peace system. Therefore co-operative action to oppose aggression from any source was deemed imperative.

After the successive failures of the League in its attempts to check the conquests of Manchuria and Ethiopia, this technique was tacitly dropped. When the Spanish civil war broke out effort to secure nonintervention was made through the work of a diplomatic committee meeting in London, having no relation with the League. No formal attempt has yet been made at Geneva or elsewhere to oppose a united front to Japan's present aggression in China. For that reason Japan is now proceeding far more recklessly than was the case six years ago.

While the collective security system did not prove effective in the time of test, it obviously was a restraining force. Aggressive actions, taken without the slightest regard for treaties or other aspects of international law, have multiplied at a startling pace since the flag was hauled down at Geneva. Nor is this a matter which concerns belligerents alone. Piratical submarine attacks on neutrals in the Mediterranean are paralleled by a totally illegal blockade which Japan is imposing on China, and which may at any time produce attacks on third-party shipping.

Under the circumstances some reconstitution of the collective security system is to be expected and the conference scheduled at Geneva this week must be regarded as a first step in that direction.

All of the Mediterranean and Black Sea powers are invited, and also Germany. Since circumstantial evidence indicates that the piratical submarines are either German or Italian, the inclusion of these two nations in the conference seems at first glance to undermine its usefulness. Actually this is not the case. The nationality of the pirate submarines is suspected, not proven. The attitude taken toward the conference by Germany, and particularly by Italy, will help to determine whether present suspicions are well founded.

One possible outcome of the conference is an agreement whereby warships of all the powers with Mediterranean interests would be used jointly to protect merchantmen of nations neutral in the Spanish war. Under such an arrangement convoys might be arranged, or reprisals undertaken by warships of one co-operating nation for attacks on the merchant shipping of another.

The illegal Japanese blockade of China is not yet as serious as the Mediterranean piracy, through measures taken by a Japanese warship yesterday to keep a British steamer from preceeding to Hongkong point in the same general direction. But obviously if the undeclared war in the Far East results in attacks on peaceful third-party shipping the question of naval protection will also immediately arise there.

This would be the case whether or not our neutrality act is invoked, for nothing in that act would keep American ships from legitimate trade with China. It is true that section 10 of the act would keep American merchantmen from being armed, but this would only emphasize their right to naval protection, if they were complying with other stipulations of the law.

The proceedings of the conference on piracy in the Mediterranean will therefore be watched attentively. If collective action against submarine piracy is deemed necessary there, similar steps may also soon be advisable to prevent blockade piracy in the Pacific.

The recent record shows that toleration of illegal affronts results only in an intensification of those affronts. As that knowledge sinks in the reconstitution of collective action, as the cheapest and most efficient way to achieve security from modern piracy, will be more and more strongly advocated.

Come Just As You Are.

The old alibi about not having a thing to wear need not deter delegates from accepting invitations to attend the second annual W. C. N. C. The less they wear, the better dressed they'll be, according to the style dictators of this outdoors organization. For these are the members of the West Coast Nudist Conference, with whom chic leans to the chilly side.

Not content with mere playing and sunbathing, the W. C. N. decided last year that it was high time for all good nudists to show their essential humanity by adopting resolutions. The way of all flesh, when convening, is to elect officers, chart a course of action, and make after-dinner speeches. In these respects, nudists are no different. But, alas, they are entirely left out in the cold in not being able to participate in the best feature of any convention—the colorful costume parade.

At any rate, the ladies of the W. C. N. won't have to consult an etiquette book about their invitations. For they are probably the only ones on record which mean, literally and figuratively, just what is printed on them—"Do Not Dress."

The Argentine Election.

Dr. Roberto M. Ortiz, finance minister until he resigned to campaign, appears to have been elected president of Argentina for the next six years. It was the country's first national election since the depression began. Moreover, Dr. Ortiz was pledged to continue the financial and administrative policies of his predecessor. Thus his victory may be interpreted as a vote of confidence in the government coalition headed by President Justo. The latter could not succeed himself under Argentine law.

Scattered disorder and some bloodshed are reported to have attended the polling. Since Argentina is an orderly and democratic country, this may indicate more than mere hot-headed ebullience. The country is restless, a fact reflected by the strenuousness of the campaign; elaborate publicity devices were everywhere used by all three parties. Moreover, early returns from Buenos Aires and the vicinity indicate that a higher percentage of citizens than ever before took part in the election.

Internal causes of unrest do not seem very serious. Considerable question has been raised concerning certain recent by-elections. Radical and Socialist opponents of the government charge it with having manipulated at least one congressional election. Another disturbing influence has been an intimation from President Justo that the universal male suffrage law would benefit by amendment. The law is the pride of Argentina, and the suggestion of amendment has stirred popular resentment.

In addition, there have been external stimuli for Argentina's unrest. First in importance perhaps is the growth, or imagined growth, of both Communist and Fascist influence. This has not added to the country's sense of security. The Pan-American peace conference, with its emphasis on democracy, appears likewise to have had an unsettling effect on the masses, inspiring them to a desire for greater participation in government affairs. Finally, the Spanish revolution has stirred the country deeply.

In this last connection, the election of Dr. Ortiz may influence the fate of Spain. In a few weeks Spain comes before the Assembly of the League of Nations for re-election to the Council. With Poland, she has what is known as a semi-permanent seat on that body. This means that by gentlemen's agreement she is to be re-elected perpetually. However, there are many Latin-American states which would now be glad to register their disapproval of the Valencia government by ignoring the unwritten agreement and blocking the re-election.

Probably such opposition would be unsuccessful without support from Argentina, which dominates the Latin-American bloc. Dr. Ortiz is a conservative. If his government should take the lead at Geneva, conceivably the loyalists would be thwarted in their hope to continue on the Council. And the moral effects of such a rebuff would be far-reaching.

When I Was A Fish.

Can the fish love the fisherman? asked Martial. The cynicism needs no answer. Not so, however, the converse question, Can the fisherman love the fish? He should, at least to the extent of acknowledging a basic similarity.

At Cambridge, England, they have determined that in its essentials the mentality of a fish is the same as that of a man. Before the august assembly of the British Association for the Advancement of Science it was told how experiments have demonstrated that a fish has reflexes, forms mental associations, and has powers of memory and emotion, in each case comparable to man's. Hence the ability of a fish to blink his eye; to rise for food when a bell is rung; to return to his native shallows for spawning; to be frightened permanently out of such natural impulses as the will to devour smaller fish.

Vegetarianism should boom at this news. For who could abide putting lemon and fork to tissue which, reproduced for another eon or two, might give the world another "Gone With the Wind" (or would it be "Tide")? For it was only a matter of a few billion years ago that our ancestors were gliding about on fins. And it is no secret that all of us at one stage of our careers had gills.

On the other hand, perhaps it would be better for man to continue his trawling and hooking which, presumably, is retarding piscatorial evolution. Perhaps it would do better for the fish to remain in his present undeveloped condition. He goes where he wants when he wants—lives, loves and dies in slithery complacency.

"Poor fish," you say, or, with Leigh Hunt, "dull goggles"? Nay, lucky fish. No greed to be embarrassed by ideals, no ideals to be confounded by greed. No loyalties, no ambitions, no taxes. No Shanghais.

"Woman asks divorce because her husband makes her cultivate a 20-acre farm."—News item. Ample grounds, we should say.

It's too late to try to read the handwriting on the wall when your back's to it.

'Step On It.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Prime advice, that, contained on your front page, entitled, "A Grim Holiday Reminder." Also the tops to drive carefully, save life, spare the overworked hospital and morgue staffs, which have nonetheless prepared themselves for the anticipated record business. Sane, reasonable advice, A-1 preaching, which, I fear, won't penetrate a single skull.

The present situation seems here to stay, to be augmented as more wide slaughterways replace canal and railroad beds, and more speed built into the steel-trap type of small car. The advice of the devil is stronger, against which no vision of grisly scenes seems able to prevail. The fake exhilaration of speedy driving intoxicates the feeble human mind.

The song is: Step on it. The producers put speed under the hood (because putting speed there spells extra dividends). Use it. Don't let that wild-eyed guy with the red hair pass you. Same goes for the flat-pan dame smoking the cigarette. Use your horn and get in front of these stay-at-homes. Hit that guy fixing a tire, did I?. Hell of a place to be fixing a tire. Nobody got the number—I ain't got no insurance and ain't made the second payment yet.

The current Chinese slaughter is confined mostly to Shanghai, and sympathy goes out to the 400,000,000 Chinamen always remaining. But we as an efficient nation, know how with the aid of our motor traps and gasoline, to distribute our holiday slaughter all over America. No messy business in one place. By the time you read this the road box scores for Labor Day will be in. Get the adding machines ready.

I. H. LATIMER.

Nazi Infiltration.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Hitler representatives have let it be known that they intend to organize German Nazi groups throughout the United States and would resent any interference to the plan.

In other words they will not respect the sovereignty of the best nation on God's earth, where men and women are treated like human beings, can speak their thoughts without fear of the headsman's ax, can worship God according to the dictates of their own conscience, can choose their lawmakers in honest elections without any blood-thirsty spies. Compare Hitler with our President Roosevelt, who is honest, sincere, kindly and just and abides the wishes of the masses.

I suggest that these groups, be shown pictures of conditions in Germany, have refugees tell of the poverty, misery, inhuman treatment, fear and suffering in the fatherland. If they are still of the same opinion, send them back to their native land and may God have mercy upon their souls.

Singing Pine Owners.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the issue of The Post of September 13 you have a notice of the marriage of Miss Suzanne Martin and Mr. Raymond Alfred Hust, and in this notice you stated: "The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Williams Martin, of Singing Pines, in Fairfax, Va."

The statement "of Singing Pines, in Fairfax, Va.," is incorrect. Singing Pines for 18 years has been owned by the Misses Lewis, who conduct the "Singing Pines Tea House." The statement in your paper would lead people to believe that they no longer owned the place or had anything to do with it, and that would of necessity injure their business, which happens to be a going concern with considerable good will.

I am writing to ask that you do us the courtesy of contradicting this inference.

(Miss) MARY E. LEWIS.

More Heat Than Light.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The exchange between the editors of The Post and your correspondent, Benjamin Ginzburg, is most revealing of the ignorance in which many editorials are written.

Despite The Post's reiteration of its original editorial statement, it is still utterly incorrect to say that in Great Britain "doles and work relief are normally confined to those who can be certified as unemployables." As Mr. Ginzburg correctly points out, no real "work relief" exists in Great Britain. Secondly, the national government's "dole" is for employables, for in the long-lived depression there the unemployment insurance benefits of most former wage-earners have long since run out.

Now will The Post be willing to clear up some confusion on my part? Why do the editors maintain that we should imitate a British system which they (incorrectly) describe as a dole normally restricted to unemployables. If the Federal Government should assume entire care of the unemployables, would that not be a reversal of the traditional poor-relief policy of this country, and hence "un-American?"

And if the Federal Government should confine itself to a dole for unemployables, what unit of government, if any, would care for the able-bodied employables? The only possible answer to this is that The Post believes that employables can all get private jobs now and are not in need of public assistance. If that is the reason, it would be only fair to share your knowledge of where such jobs can be found, unless you mean that employables should accept jobs at starvation wages and thus bring the cycle of deep depression around again.

(Mrs.) J. KERWIN WILLIAMS.

Obviously it will not be easy to clear up the confusion which this lively correspondent admits. She must learn first that The Post is absolutely correct in saying that in England doles for out-of-work employables are regarded as an emergency supplement to unemployment insurance benefits. Then she must realize that local government is the appropriate agency to care for our unemployables. Then she must learn that unemployment insurance, supplemented by free public employment exchanges, should provide the first line of defense for out-of-work employables. When this fails Federal aid to hard-pressed local authorities is, of course, imperative. A final desirable discovery on our correspondent's part would be that it is easier to attribute ignorance to others than to demonstrate one's own knowledge.—Editor.

"Japan States Her Aim."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial "Japan States Her Aim" is excellent. The main question is whether the bully of Asia can make herself the bully of the world by subjugating the manpower and resources of China. Peace in the future may be possible if the military dictatorships can be held to their present size but not if they are allowed to build up great empires. The United States should act now.

Some time ago Secretary Hull, perhaps as an excuse for inaction, intimated that he did not know the objectives of Japan and China. The only possible doubt even at that time was whether Japan would be satisfied with several additional provinces of China or whether she would try to take the whole of it now. This doubt is now cleared up. The Japanese Foreign Minister announces that Japan is out to smash the Central government of China. If Secretary Hull will compare the language used now with that used in regard to Chang Hsueh-liang in 1931-32, he will see that the Japanese words mean that all China is to be a puppet state if the Japs can conquer it.

The Japanese have a degree of hypocrisy which no Westerner can approach. Their present words can be interpreted only by what they have said and done in the past. It is evident that when the Japanese talk of "co-operation" with China, they mean that every Chinese from generalissimo to bootblack must take orders from Japan, and when the Japanese speak of developing China's resources, they mean that every Chinese who owns a factory, mine, bank, railroad, or electric light plant must turn it over to some Japanese.

Presumably the Department of State is well informed concerning the peculiarities of the Japanese vocabulary, and it is to be hoped that the Secretary will now take official note of Japanese aims and will lead the world in effective measures to check the threatened conquest—and I don't mean mere pious exhortations. I mean economic sanctions and if necessary naval action.

T. A. B. BAREFOOT.

Washington, Sept. 4.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For over three years with daily regularity, I have read the sound editorial page of The Post. Discounting political bias in spite of the words "An Independent Newspaper" flying from your masthead, on the whole I find your editorial articles interesting and clearly written.

I wish to single out for honorable mention that entitled "Japan States Her Aim" in your September 3 issue, presenting such a reasoned outline of the questions involved in the Far Eastern crisis that even a child of 12 or 14 could understand your viewpoint. If you will allow me to contradict you, however, your reasoning is based on a priori thinking, which is exactly as it should be to win your readers' approval.

You have once more shown true gentlemanly chivalry in taking up the cudgels for China—and you are 100 per cent right—because "the China which Chiang has made is strong." So the fair lady's marriage portion is what explains it. In the material sense, certainly, she is stronger than 10 or 20 years ago, but has she not weakened in other ways? If you have read that exquisite tale of Chinese life, "The House of Exile," you'll comprehend my meaning, Mr. Editor.

I must also criticize the following passage from your editorial: "The United States and other nations whose fundamental interests are menaced by Japan's aggression must estimate the weakness and fear-haunted bluster of Tokyo for what it is." Try to place yourself in imagination in the position of Japan; you might then, very probably come to the conclusion that neither the United States nor other occidental powers have any right (jus) to their interests in China. Of course, they may exhibit some very good claims at the bar of international justice, but these may soon be invalidated by mutual consent of counsel.

If you had ever tried to sell knitted goods, for instance, to our Central and South American neighbors in competition with Japanese salesmen, you would realize that an export trade is as vital to the Rising Sun empire's economy as it is to ours. Even with a labor cost differential in their favor, Japan's products must bear much higher transportation charges to reach those markets, whereas the vast Chinese market is only a short haul from factory to consumer.

A nation that can arise from feudalism to take its place with the world's great industrial powers within the span of three generations cannot help but be feared by the latter; this confirms what you report Chiang Kai-shek to have wisely said, which I should like to paraphrase, viz.: If the nations having interests in China do not put a stop to Japanese aggression, it is because such interests are not of primordial importance to them.

The Post Impressionist

Antietam Reverie.

THIS really looks like a battlefield. . . . Most of them don't, and the result is disenchantment. . . . That monument there, the guide says, is where Gen. Mansfield fell. . . . "Twenty-seven generals were either killed or wounded in this battle." . . . Well, that's one for my friends who were in the A. E. F. In 1862, generals really got in there and bared their breasts.

Antietam saw the bloodiest day's fighting in American history. . . . On the right, beyond that granite shaft, the firing was so intense that the green corn came down as if cut by a gigantic scythe. . . . "There were so many dead you could cross the field by steppinng from body to body." . . . Now the corn is growing again, waving serenely in a field once irrigated by blood.

The guide steers you to Burnside's Bridge, practically unchanged in 75 years. He talks about the scrap here as a Greek might talk about Thermopylae. . . . Leonidas was Gen. Robert Toombs and the Spartans were his 1,200 Georgians, arrayed against a far superior Union force under Burnside. . . . Why was this tiny bridge so important? If Burnside could have taken it in a hurry, McClellan could have bent back the Confederate flank, bottled up Lee and thwarted his escape across the Potomac. . . . Antietam then would have marked the end, not Appomattox three years later.

But even in the talk of all this carnage at the bridge here creeps in, unintentionally, a ridiculous note. At the height of the battle a Federal soldier discovered that he could wade across Antietam Creek. . . . So the bridge wasn't so important after all. Too bad for those who died at the bridge.

Anyway, the delay at the bridge and the timely arrival of Confederate reinforcements from Harpers Ferry halted the flanking movement and Lee executed a magnificent retreat.

Farther on the guide takes you to the top of a lofty stone tower. . . . This must have been the scene of something extraordinary. It was. . . . Down below is "Bloody Lane." In the whole carmine panorama of Antietam, this was the most sanguinary spot of all, a salient that fairly ran with gore. . . . In "Bloody Lane" the Confederate dead lay "two to five deep." . . . Here is where President Roosevelt will come on September 17 to witness a re-enactment of the battle.

Why do thoughts of Mark Twain come intruding here? . . . Oh, yes; his great philippic against war. . . . At first "The loud little handful will shout for the war." . . . "A few fair men on the other side will argue and reason against the war." . . . They will get a hearing at first, but not for long. . . . "Those others will outshout them." . . . They will be stoned from the platform, and free speech will be strangled by furious men. . . . "Next the statesmen will invent cheap lies," blaming the side that has been attacked, and every man will be glad of the "soothing falsities." . . . "Thus he will bye and bye convince himself that the war is just, and will thank God for the better sleep he enjoys after this process of grotesque self-deception."

What would Mark Twain say today about the Japanese butchery in China? What would he say about the slaughter of women and children behind the lines, about the strafing of a friendly British ambassador—all without as much as a declaration of war?

But, here, this is Antietam. . . . Everybody up here is an authority on the battle. Not only the guide, but your newspaper friends from nearby Hagerstown talk about the flanking movements, the charges and counter-charges, the artillery enfilade. . . . Do they shudder as they tell you that the dead lay "two to three deep?" No, they don't.

If they like you, they give you a musket ball found on the field of battle and a brass button from a Federal officer's coat. Why? Do they believe in glorifying war? No, that isn't it. . . . Two of them, you learn, were in the World War and came back anything but bloodthirsty. . . . They don't like war.

But you sense that, in their eyes, Antietam was something different, something a bit more sublime. . . . Here men taught "the Romans how to die." . . . Here men could see their foe, kill or get killed. . . Here, they must reason, was gallantry in the classic meaning of the word.

Anyway, the scars are all gone now. In Hagerstown, on last Memorial Day, an old warrior in gray and another in blue rode in the parade together. . . . Onlookers applauded and cried. . . . Hagerstown, 12 miles from Antietam, was a 50-50 town in 1861-65, and it still is as it prepares to commemorate the seventy-fifth anniversary of the battle. . . . The streets are garlanded with two kinds of flags, the Stars and Stripes of the victor and the Stars and Bars of the vanquished. . . . Lee and McClellan are united on a memorial 50-cent piece. . . The bands play "Dixie" as well as the national anthem. . . . Hagerstown has even selected a queen for the occasion—Queen Antietam.

Will all wars seem romantic in retrospect?

Is it merely time that has wrought all this? Or, remembering Mark Twain, are there varying degrees of barbarity in war? Perhaps you shouldn't think about Shanghai when you go to the Antietam festival. . . . It would not be good manners in the presence of a tolerant and friendly people. . . . After all, no women and children were killed behind the lines at Antietam.

Iowa Idea

By
Elmer T. Peterson

Farmer-Businessman Union.

Des Moines.

WICHITA ROTARIANS were grunting, sweating and straining at a big rope. At the other end was a group of husky farmers, who seemed singularly placid and devoid of exertion. It was the great tug-of-war between farmers and city men at the annual get-together picnic of farmers and Wichita Rotarians a few years ago.

Suddenly a Rotarian gave a shout. He had discovered that the canny farmers had tied their end of the rope to a tree.

The city men couldn't win because they were pulling against something that roots in the soil.

It is good for town and city men to realize that everything has roots in the soil—even in the great cities of the East. In Iowa the consciousness of this fact is perhaps more acute than in most States because the tall corn literally shadows the cities, and the pungent smell of new wheat drifts into the market places.

This has given rise to a new "Iowa Idea" which promises to go far. The remarkable thing about it is that someone hadn't thought of it before.

• • • •

THE PROGRAM is to form a close and sympathetic union of young farmers and young businessmen, so that in the years to come there will be complete mutual understanding, and avoidance of the unnecessary conflicts and irritations which have sometimes worked to the disadvantage of all concerned.

Several preliminary meetings have been held in Iowa during the past week, as the result of the dream of E. N. Hopkins, of the Meredith Publishing Co., who, many years ago, succeeded in enlisting important businessmen in the 4-H farm boys' and girls' movement.

It was his idea that the Iowa Rural Young People's Assembly, the 4-H element, the Junior Chamber of Commerce, the Iowa Extension Service, the Smith-Hughes students and other organizations could be brought together in the mutual adventure. All the elements responded enthusiastically, and it is expected that within two or three weeks a national movement will be well under way.

Already the national officers of the Junior Chamber of Commerce and representatives of young farmers have committed themselves in favor of the program. They see in this movement a means for constructive co-operation which will eventually mean good economics, good social conditions and good government. Of course, the movement is wholly nonpolitical.

• • • •

THE FOLLOWING paragraphs appear in the "Preamble" which has been drawn up and presented for consideration:

"If we have learned one thing during the stringency of the past few years, it is this . . . that there is a complete and absolute interdependence of business and agriculture in the United States.

"The problem of more widespread understanding and co-operation between the two groups has long been recognized, but little concrete action has heretofore been attempted."

The following purposes have been declared:

1. To develop a broader understanding of agricultural problems by young businessmen and city problems by young farmers.

2. To promote community development through co-operative effort by both farm and city young people.

3. To develop individual initiative, personality, responsibility, and character by means of joint undertakings on the part of city and farm groups.

An imposing array of adventures has been drawn up, including educational projects with exchange speakers, round-table discussions, exchange association memberships (as for instance young farmers belonging to Junior Chambers), development of local libraries, safety programs, opportunities for development of leadership and other talents, sponsorship of junior, 4-H and Future Farmer events, shows, picnics, camps, etc. There are other ideas in the agenda related to soil conservation, pest eradication, fostering of wildlife, recreational events, and so on.

• • • •

E. T. MEREDITH, Secretary of Agriculture in President Wilson's Cabinet, was one of the prime movers of the national 4-H Club movement, and now his son, E. T. Meredith, jr., is taking a leading part in this rural-urban get-together movement. The initiative, however, will be taken by the organizations themselves.

Special efforts will be made to keep this movement entirely free of political entanglements or involvements, it is understood.

With a new generation coming on, the constructive value of such a sensible and practical program can hardly be overestimated, and the leaders are hopeful of building in the Middle West and in the Nation a new and vivid consciousness of the fact that all our welfare has its roots in the soil.

McNutt-Quezon Calm

High Commissioner and Philippine President Forget Feud In Face Of Refugees And MacMurray Survey.

By Vicente Albano Pacis.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Manila.

WHAT MANY had expected to be a McNutt-Quezon battle became a love feast, but it was just as well. Co-operation was essential because of the arrival in Manila of some 3,000 refugees from China, most of them Americans. Of them Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, jr., was Refugee No. 1.

There was enough martial spirit in Manila as it was, without a McNutt-Quezon fight. The city has some 10,000 Chinese and 2,000 Japanese residents, and the police continue to have their hands full trying to see to it that these nationalities do not carry their war here. The Chinese, being the larger group, would probably be the aggressors in Manila. Fortunately, they have several newspapers which serve as a safety valve for most of their fighting spirit. Carrying only Chinese Central News Agency reports, their newspapers, at least one of which has an English edition every time the Japanese invade China, keep up their honor.

Expected Feud Off At Quezon's Arrival.

THE EXPECTED fight between McNutt and Quezon—centering on McNutt's insistence on the prerogatives of his office and his assertion that Philippine democracy was lacking in substance—was off the moment Quezon disembarked on his return from the United States. It was immediately announced that he would make an official call on the United States High Commissioner the next day and that the latter would return the call the following day.

One of the social phenomena in Manila is that whenever Quezon opens his cigarette case, those nearest him rush to his aid with lighters by the score. It never fails to happen, regardless of the occasion, and Quezon would not be human if he did not appreciate it. But the press photographers who covered his call on McNutt caught Quezon, the guest, lighting the cigarette of McNutt, the host. It was news, of course—it was a "natural" for the rotogravure sections. And it was the smoke of peace.

If there were skeptics who continued to believe in a McNutt-Quezon fight even after this, they all gave up a few days later. First, the High Commissioner announced that he would attend an open-air welcome banquet for Quezon, the first Governor General or High Commissioner to attend such an affair. And, when Quezon rose to deliver his speech, he declared that conflict between the High Commissioiner and himself was impossible, that there never was a more splendid harmony between the American and the Philippine governments than that which exists at the present time.

Quezon knows, of course, that President Roosevelt's letter of instruction to McNutt specifically states that the U. S. High Commissioner shall take precedence over all American and Philippine officials in the islands. Furthermore, Quezon brought back to the Philippines a joint committee of experts headed by Ambassador John Van A. MacMurray. The committee comes as a fact-finding body. A Quezon-McNutt controversy over precedence, Philippine democracy, consular correspondence, public toasts, etc., would have been a most unedifying spectacle.

Quezon Concentrates On Three-Point Program.

QUEZON is settling down to a three-point program, pending final re-definition of American-Philippine economic relations. Main points of his program are:

(1) Expenditure of the 100,000,000 pesos, which the Philippine government is collecting from the American Treasury in the form of refundable excise tax levied on Philoppine cocoanut oil;

(2) Boosting wages in the various industries not only as a form of social justice but in order to spread out to the masses the benefits of Philippine-American relationship including the free trade; and

3. A comprehensive survey of public opinion with respect to his plan to advance th date of Philippine independence from 1945 to 1939, after the masses shall have been beneficiaries of the free trade, and can thus judge American Philippine relations as parties to the relationship and not as rank outsiders.

Quezon's 100,000,000-peso project has two phases. One consists of the purchase of big landed estates and their re-sale at convenient terms to the tenants, together with a plan for helping the tenant cultivate his land, make it profitable, and own it permanently. The other covers the development of Mindanao through settlement on the one hand and the opening up of rubber plantations on the other.

"We cannot set down any ironclad policy," he says, "which we shall follow in the purchase of haciendas. We have many landpoor property owners who will go to any length to satisfy the conditions we set down. For instance, if we should state that we shall buy those estates in which there are agrarian troubles, what will prevent a land owner who is eager to sell out from fomenting his own agrarian trouble among his tenants, then telling us, 'Look here; we, too, have trouble!' But there are haciendas that are so vast, that include entire municipalities within their boundaries, and whose owners naturally control the social and political life of entire political districts. These, we should buy by all means because in doing so we shall release the tenants not only from economic but also from political slavery. Our objectives will be to promote public order and tranquility and to redistribute properties more equitably."

President Negotiating With Rubber Tire Concern.

THE PRESIDENT himself has revealed that he is in negotiation with the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. for assistance in the development of rubber plantations in Mindanao. When reminded that Firestone once tried to open up plantations in Mindanao but failed because of the limitation of corporate landholding to 1,024 hectares under the land law, he argued that big landholdings are not necessary, that both the sugar and the copra industries, contrary to the predictions of American businessmen, have been developed successfully without change in the land law.

In his first speech outside of Manila following his return from America, Quezon attacked the sugar barons for paying low wages to their laborers, demanded that they raise their pay on threat of compelling them by legislation. When criticized on the ground that he is retaliating because the sugar people are generally against his plan to advance Philippine independence to 1939, he explained that he is for a general boost in wages in all industries, but started with the sugar people because he made the speech in Iloilo, the sugar center, and because the sugar industry, being the No. 1 beneficiary of the free trade with America, is undeniably in the best position to raise its wages.

He further explained his wage-boosting campaign as an attmpt to spread to the masses the benefits of relationship with America, especially the economic boons.

On this assertion hangs a hunch. It is generally known that the masses are for independence and the sooner the better; the substantial classes, generally for delaying independence, and the later the better. The accelerated independence plan has the backing of the former, the opposition of the latter. Yet Quezon is equalizing American benefits in order to give to the supporters of his plan a share of the advantages of American control already enjoyed by the opponents of his plan. It looks very much as if he is fomenting public opinion against his plan; and, if this is the case, the conclusion is inevitable that he expects public opinion to reject his plan.

A close student of Quezon's nationalism has an interesting version that is eminently worth repeating:

"The President," he says, "went to America when the Philippine problem was completely a dead issue there. How was he to resurrect it—how was he to attract attention? He decided on exploding a bomb—he proposed independence in one or two years. Well, Washington was startled all right; once more it focussed its attention on the Philippines, and Quezon returned with the joint committee of experts headed by Ambassador John Van A. MacMurray. But now that he has succeeded in getting attention and action in Washington, it remains to be seen how he will carry out his accelerated independence plan—or tuck it away."

It is reported that Quezon has instructed every provincial and municipal official to observe and report public sentiment regarding earlier independence. Whether he expects to reap as he sows or he is simply trying to insure that the resulting public opinion will be based on a sound, first-hand understanding of the benefits of Philippine-American relations, remains to be seen.

Duce To Berlin

By Barnet Nover.

Oiling The Fascist Axis.

FROM THE VIEWPOINT of sheer drama Benito Mussolini's impending visit to Germany will easily take first place in the list of the post-war peregrinations of Europe's hot-footed statesmen. It promises to have all the elements of the spectacular. But whether the meeting of the Fascist dictators will prove anything more than a show designed to impress the world is by no means certain.

Only once before since he came into power has the Duce set foot outside of Italian territory. In 1925 he made the short trip across Lake Maggiore to Locarno to sign the great five-power treaty which Hitler was later to treat as just another scrap of paper.

Possibly because the Locarno visit constituted anything but a personal triumph for Mussolini and also, no doubt, because of the dangers involved in leaving his own country, the Duce has since done all his traveling outside of Italian territory by proxy.

No wonder, then, that there is considerable fluttering in the diplomatic dovecotes over the circumstance that at this time Mussolini should have agreed to go abroad and that his destination should be Berchtesgaden and Berlin.

• • • •

DRAMATIC in itself, the impending meeting of the dictators comes at an extremely dramatic moment in world history.

In the Far East, Germany's anti-Communist partner is locked in a death grapple with China. In Spain the victories of Franco are bringing the insurgents no nearer final victory. In the meantime the London nonintervention committee appears to be reaching the end of its days. And in the Mediterranean, nations whose shipping has been at the mercy of piratical submarines of undetermined but clearly guessed-at nationality, are preparing to join forces to wipe out the menace.

How does all this affect the vaunted Berlin-Rome axis which, if we are to believe what Berlin and Rome tell us, stands unshaken?

The answer is not easy to give because it so clearly depends on a number of unknowns. These include (1) the outcome of the Sino-Japanese war; (2) the outcome of the fighting in Spain; (3) the price Germany is prepared to pay to keep Italy from establishing a new rapprochement with Great Britain and thus smashing the Berlin-Rome axis, and (4) Germany's immediate ambitions in Central Europe.

• • • •

LET US take these up seriatim. The war in the Far East is of concern to both Fascist powers. Both nations cannot help viewing the situation in the Far East with very mixed feelings. If Japan succeeds in establishing its hegemony over China the open door will be closed shut. This is a development which neither Italy nor Germany can view with equanimity. Both nations have been courting China as a potential market of importance. To see that market destroyed by Japan or any other nation can hardly suit their purposes.

Yet if Japan is bled white the consequences for the Fascist powers in Europe might prove equally bad. For then Russia, released from its haunting fears of a war on two widely separated fronts, could throw its entire weight into the European scales.

The effect of such a development on the Spanish situation, for instance, can easily be imagined. And a Russia stronger in Europe is a Russia capable of exerting an enormous pull on the borderland regions, such as Rumania and Poland, which have been flirting with the Third Reich.

• • • •

IN SPAIN the war goes on. A year ago the Fascist powers were certain that an insurgent victory was just around the corner. But despite the capture of Bilbao and more recently of Santander that victory remains far off.

Offsetting the fall of Santander to the rebels is the loyalist capture of Belchite. Above all the circumstance that after 11 months of siege Madrid remains a government stronghold is not a happy augury for the Fascist powers.

To protect their investments in Rebel Spain, Germany and Italy may have to increase their aid to Franco. Until now they have been able to do this with impunity. Possibly this, for them, happy state of affairs may continue. More than once have London and Paris bravely marched up the hill in defiance of Rome and Berlin only soon after to march down again.

But one never can tell. The democratic worm may turn and set like a boa constrictor. And the way for such action may be paved by the collapse of the London nonintervention committee and the impending Mediterranean parley.

• • • •

AT ANY RATE whatever raw material supplies they may have received from Rebel Spain in payment for their valuable services to Franco the Spanish investment of the Fascist powers has thus far been far greater than the returns. Certainly intervention in Spain has not eased existing stresses and strains either in Germany or Italy.

• • • •

THE POSSIBILITY arises, therefore, that a new effort to escape the tightening ring of economic pressure may be made.

But at this point the basic policies of Hitler and Mussolini coincide far less than they conflict. Any further extension of German influence in Central Europe and the Balkans constitutes a potential danger to Italy. That is particularly true with respect to German influence in Austria. And with Great Britain in a mood for another Anglo-Italian rapprochement, Italy has an ace in the hole in the poker game of the dictators.

But, on the other hand, the Berlin-Rome axis may continue to have a very considerable nuisance value so far as any negotiations between the Fascist governments, on the one hand, and the west European democracies on the other. The chances are, therefore, that they will hold on to it. But the existence of the Berlin-Rome axis will not prevent either of the Fascist partners from undertaking flirtations with other powers.

The meeting of Mussolini and Hitler, it can be taken for granted, will be made the occasion of fervid pledges of allegiance to the Fascist entente. But behind these expressions of community of interest and policy the real conflict of interests between the dictators will remain.

A Red-Hot Tale

By William Lyon Phelps

'Down Under.'

These two words, so far as this article is concerned, have nothing to do with Australia or New Zealand; they are the words chosen for the title of a new red-hot tale of murder and mystery and horror; and I recommend it most heartily. For in reading of the impossible trobules in this impossible story you will forget your own troubles, which are not only possible, but actual. You remember the man who said, "Life was just one blank thing after another;" well, that isn't so bad as it sounds; many people endure it with equanimity. But, as a commentator on the statement remarked, "with him Life was just ten blank things all at once."

• • • •

The author of "Down Under" is an Englishwoman who calls herself in print Patricia Wentworth; this and her other stories are published by J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia.

She has never disappointed me; I read her stories, which incidentally are well written, for excitement; and I have found every one of them a genuine thriller.

• • • •

In this new book she almost outdoes herself in fantastic situations and in the creation of black-hearted scoundrels; her public enemy No. 1 is such a devilish fiend that we are full of pleasure at his horrible fate; for, as Hamlet remarked, "everyone likes to see the engineer of diabolical wickedness hoist with his own petard."

The situations in this book are so remote from actual life (although they take place in England) that one can enjoy it as a pure romance.

• • • •

I have read many books that have aroused in me overwhelming merriment; but I never read a funnier little book than "The Need of Change," by Julian Street. If you have not read it or have not read it for a long time, and wish to enjoy the antiseptic delight of outrageous mirth, here is my presciption for you.

If anyone had looked in the window of our sitting room on a certain night years ago, one would have thought the three people within were hopelessly insane. One of them was reading aloud "The Need of Change;" the other two were in convulsions, shrieking for mercy; and occasionally all three, with the book fallen on the floor, were beyond articulate speech.

Weather Parley

The Weather Bureau will be represented next week at the International Technical Conference at Lima, Peru, by Edgar B. Calvert, chief of the forecast division, and Delbert M. Little, chief of the aerological division. Both will serve in the capacity of advisers, particularly during the discussion of meteorological problems affecting inter-continental relations between the Pan-American nations.

Interior Holiday

Interior employes have selected Constitution Day, September 17, as the date for a program of entertainment which includes everything from miniature Olympic games to a colonial minuet. The reason for the date is the half-holiday in Government offices on that day.

The sports events will take place in the afternoon at the Fort Hunt CCC Camp on Memorial Highway. One energetic group plans to cycle the 15 miles there, just to warm up for badminton, swimming, softball, volley ball, tug-of-war, archery and quoits. Miss Interior will be selected during a bathing beauty contest.

In the Interior auditorium that evening there will be a concert of classical music interspersed with patriotic songs. Amplifiers will be installed so that the guests may hear the President's radio address.

Miss Interior will lead the grand march which will open the Constitution Ball, the climax of the day. There will be dancing in the cafeteria, and for those who still crave violent exercise, the activity space adjoining the cafeteria will be opened for square dances.

Those wishing to take part in the historical tableaux and minuet are to meet in the activity space at 3:45 p. m. today. Miss Evelyn Adams, of the General Land Office, is to be mistress of ceremonies.

Post Nominations

Nominations for offices in the Department of Agriculture Post No. 36, American Legion, were made at last week's meeting as follows: Commander, P. L. Blake; first vice commander, C. E. V. Berger; second vice commander, Elmer Vennerdrow and W. K. Brownold; third vice commander, L. H. Sample and Fred DeJaeger; chaplain, J. Ray Andrews; sergeant at arms, R. R. Smith; finance officer, Arthur Riemer; historian, E. L. Andrews.

Attack Illusion

Just to dispel the illusion said to be common among Europeans that Americans live exclusively in skyscrapers and glass houses, the Historical American Buildings Survey has sent a series of architectural exhibits to Great Britain, France and Poland. The American exhibit at the Paris Exposition includes photographs and drawings sent over by the survey.

The Federal WPA project which provided most of the funds for the survey was terminated two months ago, but the work will continue with volunteer aid from schools and colleges. State WPA projects and a public works allotment of $16,000 recently made to the National Park Service for the purpose.

In three and a half years of the survey's existence it has collected 13,000 measured drawings and 16,000 photographs, which are housed in the Library of Congress and are available to architects and students. Nearly 10,000 orders for copies of the prints and drawings have been filled to date. A catalogue of the entire collection will be published and the survey's Nation-wide analysis of early American architecture will be edited in the future, the National Park Service announces.

Typical of the work being done on State projects in co-operation with the survey is Massachusetts' recording of Derby Wharf in Salem, which is expected to be designated a national historic site by the park service. In New Jersey workers are studying the old custom of "mining" cedar logs from swamps for use as building material. Early Jersey builders figured that it was easier to dig out the trees which had fallen into the swamps than it was to cut down living trees, especially as cedar wood is hard enough to withstand the effects of water. The practice has been resumed in recent years.

Civil Service Quotas

Aspirants for civil service appointments should be encouraged to learn that the quotas for 40 States and Territories are not filled at present. The only States which have exceeded their quotas are Missouri, Massachusetts, Vermont, Nebraska, Utah, Iowa, South Dakota, Washington, North Dakota, Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia.

Reporting the condition of apportionment at the close of business August 31, the Civil Service Commission points out that Puerto Rico, Hawaii and Alaska lead the list of those in arrears with appointments. Puerto Rico, for instance, is entitled to 535 appointments, of which only 33 are filled at present.

California's quota is only about one-third filled, and Texas and Louisiana are not far behind.

Puzzling Sauropod

The Smithsonian has been thrown into a turmoil by the discovery of a dinosaur where no dinosaur is supposed to be.

Dr. Charles W. Gilmore, one of the institution's paleontologists, was rooting around in western Utah this summer when he came across the bones of a sauropod, the largest creature the world has ever known. The astounding thing about this fossil was not its size (the leg bones are 7 feet long and what is left of the tail stretches out 40 feet), but the fact that it belongs to a geological era much later than that during whish the last dinosaur is supposed to have passed on.

The sauropod, according to the Smithsonian, had a tremendous appetite and very little brain. Since it weighed sometimes as much as 30 tons and was considerably bigger than anything else around at the time, it had very few enemies and managed with little effort to remain the dominant form of life for 20,000,000 years. The reason for the breed's extinction has never been learned. Whatever it was, the Utah branch of the family apparently managed to escape it for a few million years longer than its fellows.

Figures Show Crime Decline Since Repeal

Institute Cites Records to Show Dry Forces' Data Erroneous.

Using Government statistics, the Distilled Spirits Institute, Inc., yesterday asserted that crime in the United States has decreased since repeal.

Moreover, the institute said, the crime record of the first States which remain dry—Kansas, Tennessee, Mississippi, Georgia and Oklahoma—is in every instance worse with respect to major crimes than the record of adjoining wet States.

"The unescapable conclusion," said the institute's report, "is that legalization of liquor, under suitable regulation and control, contributes to a reduction of crime, while prohibition contributes to its increase."

The report of the Distilled Spirits Institute, based on figures compiled by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, was an answer to charges at the last convention of the Antisaloon League that crime has increased 100 per cent since repeal.

One of the tabulations of major crimes reveals that every year of the last three years of prohibition had a larger record of murder, manslaughter and robbery than the highest of any of the first three years of repeal.

The report shows an average of 1,694 cases of murder and manslaughter for the dry years of 1931, 1932 and 1933, while the average for the first repeal yeaers of 1934, 1935 and 1936 was 1,516. Likewise, it shows a drop in robberies and burglaries.

Major crimes, the report said, decreased for the country as a whole more than 112,000 cases in 1936, as compared to 1935. Such large cities as Boston, Baltimore, St. Louis and New York, it was added, have either reduced the number of arrests for drunkenness, or else show that the problem is nowhere near as great as it was before prohibition.

Choral Group to Close Sylvan Theater Year

The Tempo Choral Society of Washington will give a program of spirituals and other choral numbers tonight at 8:15 at the Sylvan Theater, Washington Monument Grounds.

The program, which will be conducted by Dr. W. Scott Mayo, will mark the close of the present summer's series of weekly festivals, sponsored by the Community Center Department and the National Capital Parks.

Treasury Cash Ample, Weekly Loans Dropped

Morgenthau Says Costs Cut, Deficit Due to 'Special Factors.'

Secretary Morgenthau curtailed a Treasury borrowing program yesterday, explaining that "we have enough money on hand and there is no reason for further borrowing."

He also said holders of $807,000,000 of 3¼ per cent Federal notes maturing September 15 would be offered a choice of two exchange issues—1¼ per cent 15-month notes or 2 per cent five-year notes.

Relief Costs Cut.

The Secretary said he had decided to discontinue the $50,000,000 weekly issues of discount bills. Sold in anticipation of fourth-quarter tax receipts December 15, recent issues have aggregated $450,000,000. The Treasury originally had announced the series would total $500,000,000.

The Treasury chief reported expenditures for "recovery and relief "thus far this fiscal year have dropped about one-third under last year. Exclusive of a drop in repayment to lending agencies, he said Federal finances have improved over last year.

Asked why the deficit this year had increased over that a year ago, Morgenthau referred the question to Daniel W. Bell, acting budget director, who said: "I don't think that is anything to worry about. It has been due to special factors in the first two months of this year."

Has $1,100,000,000 Now.

Excluding lending agencies, Morgenthau said, "expenditures this year are running approximately as estimated."

After September 15, he added, the Treasury will resurvey its cash needs and the money markets to determine whether to begin a new series of discount bills. Bills might then be issued against March income tax receipts.

At present, the Treasury's cash working balance totals approximately $1,100,000,000. About $500,000,000 in cash will flow into the balance through third-quarter income tax collections September 15. This money, however, will go to retire $350,000,000 of maturing bills and to help pay $168,000,000 of interest due on the public debt.

The Treasury's offer to exchange 2 per cent five-year notes for the maturing 3¼ per cent issue represented the highest rate offered on such paper since 1934.

Morgenthau said expanding commercial borrowing had tended to stiffen money rates and that "it is only natural the Treasury has to pay more."

He recalled that bank loans to commerce, industry and agriculture the first half of this year increased more than $600,000,000, and said that "we are glad to see this."

Daniels Seeks Peace In Mexican Oil Dispute

Mexico City, Sept. 6 (U.P.).—United States Ambassador Josephus Daniels, commenting tonight on the controversy between Mexican government and foreign oil companies, said Washington would "view with concern" any interruption in the existing arrangement affecting American oil firms operating here.

The dispute arose out of a survey of all oil companies in Mexico by the government after which the shortening of oil workers' hours, pay increases and establishment of pensions was proposed. American oil firms protested they would be unable to operate if the reforms were adopted.

Helen Broderick Has Had Long Experience in the Playhouse.

When one thinks of "Royal Families" of the theater, one's mind instantly goes to the Barrymores. But there are others whose dynasties are just as numerous as the Barrymore clan.

Take, for example, the theatrical dynasty of Helen Broderick, RKO Radio star. Helen herself has been in the theater all her life, and her husband, son, father, mother, three uncles and two aunts are and have been in the theater for two generations. Which would seem to demonstrate that the Brodericks outnumber even the "Royal Family."

Like most good troupers, Helen began at the bottom. No over-night stardom for her! At the age of 14 she became a chorus girl, and she remained at it for eight years, appearing in, among countless others, "The Follies." It was while on tour with a show called "Jumping Jupiter" that she met and married Lester Crawford, juvenile lead of the show.

Coached by Husband.

Crawford had sensed the girl's innate talents as a comedienne, and he coached her painstakingly. That he did his job well was demonstrated by her immediate popularity. She appeared with such famous luminaries as Beatrice Lillie, Elsie Janis, Claudette Colbert, Edna May Oliver and Warren William.

But her first big chance came when she was selected for the starring role in "Fifty Million Frenchmen," a musical hit of a few years back. And when the play was made into a picture, she played her original role. Prior to that, though, she shared stellar honors with Fred and Adele Astaire and Frank Morgan in "The Band Wagon."

RKO-Radio signed Miss Broderick to a screen contract two years before she made her first picture for that company. The reason was that she was granted an extension to permit her to star in the New York production of "As Thousands Cheer," which ran 74 weeks. Her first picture under the contract was "Top Hat," with Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers. Her most recent pictures were "Meet the Missus" and "We're on the Jury," in which she was co-starred with Victor Moore.

Has Formidable Cast.

Her latest effort, just completed, is "The Life of the Party," an insane contribution to mirth, in which she is again teamed with Moore to make one of four comedy duos. Besides Miss Broderick and Mr. Moore the cast includes Gene Raymond, Harriet Hilliard, Joe Penner, Parkyakarkus, Billy Gilbert and Franklin Pangborn.

That's on the comedy side, of course, but there are others. Ann Miller, for example, the little Houston, Tex., dancer, who registered such a sensation in "New Faces of 1937." And there are singers and straight people to bring the cast up to well over 30. Six new songs will be introduced in "The Life of the Party," these being written by Allie Wrubel, George Jessel, Herb Magdison and Ben Oakland.

Home Building Is Sweeping Colony

An epidemic of home building has hit the screen colony.

With the film industry enjoying its palmiest period since before the crash, its people are in the midst of a spending spree that is making carpenters shout with glee.

Jack Benny, Joan Bennett, Bob Burns, Gail Patrick, George Burns and Gracie Allen, Fred MacMurray, Anthony Quinn and Porter Hall are all in the home-building group. Greta Garbo is buying a castle outside her native Stockholm, Sweden; Madeleine Carrol has just bought an estate in Staffordshire, England, and W. C. Fields will build at Laguna Beach soon.

Marlene Dietrich, soon to return from Europe, will be another builder when she returns to Hollywood, it is reported, and Ray Milland, featured in Paramount's color epic, "Ebb Tide," has bought a lot in Coldwater Canyon and will build there soon.

Crawford, Tone Turn Playwrights

Not having been able to find a suitable stage play for themselves during three years of searching, Joan Crawford and Franchot Tone are working out an idea of their own while vacationing after having finished "The Bride Wore Red."

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Deanna Durbin Takes on New Stature as an Actress As Well as Singer in 'One Hundred Men and Girl'

Juvenile Artiste, With Leopold Stokowski Conducting, Makes Deep Impression in New Screen Musical; New Theater for Bethesda; Rialto Changes Bill in Midweek; Notes of the Theater World.

IT WAS worth interrupting the so-called Labor Day "holiday" yesterday afternoon to sit comfortably on the shoulder blades in the private projection room of the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Exchange and be regaled by the splendid music and spirited action of "One Hundred Men and a Girl," which comes to the RKO-Keith Theater on Friday.

BELL.

Here is a film play, starring the remarkably endowed Miss Deanna Durbin, and featuring Adolphe Menjou, Mischa Auer and the eminent Leopold Stokowski, which, by the very nature of its story, makes music an integral part of its plot. As a matter of fact, music is the basis of the whole dramatic structure, with the "one hundred men" of the title a group of unemployed musicians, whom Stokowski finally conducts, and the "girl" the golden voiced and juvenile Miss Durbin. Excerpts from "Lohengrin," Liszt's "Second Rhapsody," "Tschaikowsky's "Fifth Symphony," Mozart's "Alleluja" and Verdi's "La Traviata" are introduced as naturally and as effectively as the lines which the principals speak.

There is, furthermore, a vein of unctuous comedy threading the piece that prevents its ever becoming anything more stodgy and highbrow than was intended in a story that is a simple human recital of desperate need and a young girl's eventual triumph over seemingly insuperable obstacles in an effort to find employment for her trombonist father and 99 of his capable but indigent friends, down on their luck.

But the thing that impressed this typewriter most in the high-speed velocity with which "One Hundred Men and a Girl" unspooled itself was the amazingly facile work of Deanna Durbin as an actress as well as a singer. It seemed to me that the youthful Miss Durbin, more than any other member of the cast, set the pace of the play's tempo by a performance that was as completely spontaneous, breathless and well modulated as the ebullient character she impersonated demanded. It is a finely executed study of an impetuous young girl that its star brings to this subject and one that adds immeasurably to the future promise of a charming player whose first claim to attention was based almost entirely upon the exquisite quality of her voice and the deceptive maturity of its use.

Another surprise in the picture was furnished by Leopold Stokowski, who reads his lines with the skill of a schooled actor, as well as directing his orchestra with the supreme musicianship and marvelously graceful hands for which he is so widely celebrated.

There are many others of note in the cast, including Alice Brady, Eugene Pallette, Billy Gilbert, Alma Kruger, Jed Prouty, Jameson Thomas, Christian Rub and Frank Jenks, whose individual contributions to the superiority of the film will be dwelt upon more fully in Saturday morning's review, following the Friday opening of the picture.

If merit counts for anything, Fifteenth street should be overpopulated with box-office lines next week.

A change in bill at the Rialto Theater is scheduled for tomorrow, when another double-feature program will be inaugurated. One of the attractions will be an American premiere; the other a revival. The former will be "Invitation to Waltz," a gay Viennese operetta, starring Lillian Harvey in much the same type of role that established her renown as a star of the musical screen in "Congress Dances." The revival will be "M," starring Peter Lorre, under the direction of Fritz Lang, which, despite its earlier fame as a "horror picture," still will have something new to offer audiences in that it will be presented locally for the first time with English dialogue.

Ground will be broken this week for a new motion picture theater on the outskirts of Bethesda, Md., to be owned by the Woodmont Development Company and operated under the direction of Sidney B. Lust, veteran Washington film exchange owner and exhibitor.

The house and shopping center that will be made an integral part of the property will occupy the tract of land now utilized by the practice driving course for golfers on the Rockville pike near the East-West highway. Plans for the new project have been designed by John Eberson, well-known theater architect, who already has several Washington neighborhood houses to his credit. Mr. Eberson is the gentleman who bears so striking a resemblance to the late Victor Herbert that he might easily be mistaken for his twin.

As yet unnamed, the theater will have a seating capacity of 1,000, with orchestra chairs 32 inches wide; modern cooling system and all of the latest appurtenances to make it a model of comfort and convenience. A full-sized stage also will be installed for the presentation of living entertainment when that is desired. Provision will be made for parking space for a total of approximately 1,000 cars—one for every seat in the house.

It is expected that the new structure will be ready for formal dedication in about five months. It is the present expectation of the sponsors to conduct a prize contest for the selection of a suitable name for the new theater. Full details of this plan will be made known at a later date.

Interests with which Mr. Lust is identified already have broken ground for a new picture house now under construction in Marlboro, Md., which will give the sturdy Mr. Lust representation in a pretty well defined ring around Washington, including houses in Rockville, Hyattsville, Mount Rainier and Alexandria in addition to his holdings in the Capital proper.

Horace Heidt and his Brigadiers Orchestra will present the stage entertainment at the Earle Theater the week of Friday, September 17, according to announcement made yesterday by Zone Manager John J. Payette, of the Warner interests. Heidt and his talented instrumentalists comprise one of the most popular musical units playing the Capital, their popularity ranging back to the days when Horace first came on from the West with Lobo, the noble police dog, as a perfectly trained member of his ensemble. Lobo, worse luck, since has been gathered to his fathers—or wherever it is that handsome German shepherd dogs are gathered—but Heidt has more than made up for the loss by perfecting one of the most versatile bands ever heard from the better stages. He will bring a long list of specialists with him on his impending visit to repeat the hit scored on the same stage last spring. According to my count—and I am a notoriously poor mathematician—there are ten of these individual artists and groups on Horace's current roster. Maybe more.

The deadline for this year's annual one-act play tournament, sponsored by the Community Center Department, is rapidly drawing near. Acting groups wishing to participate in the tournament, to be held in the auditorium of Roosevelt High School from October 11 to 23, inclusive, must file their registrations not later than Friday of this week, September 10.

Only the first 20 organizations entering will be accepted. The first to come in this season was the Wesley Heights Players, closely followed by the REA Play Guild, the Eckington Players, the Troupers of East Washington Community Center and the Langley Lambs Club. There is still room for more, but the time is short.

The Cinderellas of the National Capital soon are to have their day. To some member of the unfair sex there will be awarded the pair of slippers worn by Barbara Stanwyck in the filming of certain scenes in "Stella Dallas," in which Miss Stanwyck, John Boles, Anne Shirley, Alan Hale and others will be seen on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater, beginning Friday. This footgear already has been received by the Palace management, autographed by the star—the footgear, not the management. To get in on the drawing it is necessary to visit the Rainbow Room of the Hamilton Hotel, where Milton Davis and his band hold forth, not to mention fifth, sixth and so on. Whoever thought that Loew's Ray Bell—no relation—would get into the ladies' footwear business?

Win New Laurels in Filmusical

In association with the distinguished conductor, Leopold Stokowski, and a cast of excellent selection, Deanna Durbin and Adolphe Menjou, whose likenesses appear above, acquit themselves with high credit in Universal's production of "One Hundred Men and a Girl," a film play that makes admirable use of standard music, both vocal and instrumental. The picture opens on Friday as chief screen feature of the new bill at the RKO-Keith Theater, with "March of Time" added.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Sept. 6.—Recently two stars, Neil Hamilton and John Boles, have had the courage to report blackmail attempts against them to the police. An arrest was made in one case, and a warrant has been issued in the other. Both extortion plots followed the same old pattern—a woman claimed that she had been seduced by a promise of marriage. The average star would have paid rather than risk the publicity involved by resistance. That, of course, was what the extortionists expected.

JOHN BOLES.

And it is a sad comment, both on the cowardice of Hollywood's stars and the willingness of Mr. and Mrs. Public to believe anything and everything scandalous about a movie celebrity, that the expectation was justified. Blackmail has flourished in this town for years. Film star's financial managers have told me of the staggering sums that their clients have paid to racketeers who threatened them with dirty publicity; the district attorney of Los Angeles County, knowing what was going on, long ago established a special squad of Hollywood investigators but found himself checkmated by the terror of the very people that he tried to help. One of his investigators told me not long ago that to the best of his belief, blackmailers have taken at least a million a year out of Filmtown.

All that has been needed is a few men with courage enough to risk the publicity and aid in prosecuting the criminals. It will take a few good examples to make our more cowardly stars forget the unjust ban that was levied on Fatty Arbuckle. Neil Hamilton and John Boles deserve a lot of credit for the stand they have taken.

One of Hollywood's better known portrait photographers has always had a passion for filming the feminine figure in the raw. Several years ago he published a monthly magazine devoted to his studies in the nude and, in order to fill it, hired models by the gross and compiled a really "colossal" library of negatives. And that library today is a headache to at least five big stars who graduated from the ranks of his models, and to the studios that have them under contract. I never see that photographer, now eking out a rather thin living, without reflecting that there, but for the grace of his own honesty, walks a millionaire.

Hollywood has never understood Leslie Fenton and Ann Dvorak, who prefer their own independence to the best starring contract ever written. At least three times Leslie has been offered the world with a green fence around it by some studio and each time he has blithely thumbed his nose, boarded a freighter and gone hoboing until his funds were exhausted. Soon after Ann married him she made her sensational hit in "Scarface," and Warner Brothers tried to make her a banner-line star. But Ann had contracted Fenton-itis and calmly walked out on Warner Brothers in order to accompany Leslie on a vagabond tour of Europe.

They live in a rambling Mexican farmhouse on a San Fernando Valley ranch, raise walnuts and seem to care not one iota for Hollywood's glories. Mention them to a producer, and he taps his forehead significantly—but for all that they are probably the only completely happy couple in this success-mad town.

Speaking of people whose mental processes baffle Hollywood, there is also Sam Goldwyn. The other day, on one of his stages, I watched the shooting of added scenes and retakes for "Dead End"—a picture that supposedly was finished two months ago. "I thought this opus had already been previewed," I protested. "That's just the trouble," the director informed me. "It was—and I've never seen such an enthusiastic audience. I went home congratulating myself on a hit. Next morning Sam called me in and ordered retakes, and when I reminded him of the audience reaction at the preview he said, 'I don't care how much they liked it—I saw some scenes that weren't right and we're going to do them over!'" The retakes are costing Sam a neat $50,000—and, unlike most producers, he spends his own money.

The Roadside.

"MURDER IN THE RED BARN." The Roadside Theater revives the anonymous melodrama in five acts and 11 scenes, with Eugene Kressin, Frederick Kerby, Hugh M. Smythe, Betty Gray, John Van Sikken, Fred Haskin, Betty Rice, Janet Coon, Robert G. Beers, Margaret Osterwald, Jock McFadden, Harold Minor and Kari Gay. Directed by Anton Hardt. Settings by Henry C. Pearson; costumes by Dorothy Croissant. Reviewed Monday night.

Exhuming the ancient relic of a bygone vintage of melodramatic distillation upon which its early reputation was largely founded, the Roadside Theater last night inaugurated the final bill of its current summer season with a nicely overacted performance of "Murder in the Red Barn."

"Murder in the Red Barn" is something to see and listen to. It traffics in those heinous crimes and stalwart virtues that inspire grandiose speeches, exaggerated action and those frequent climaxes that end in platitudes and an audience reaction of hisses or cheers, as the case may be. The case, more often than not, is one calling for a gusty burst of sibilants and a lusty chorus of "boos." Measured by the yardstick of sustained "sissing" and "booing," last night's interpretation of the rickety old piece ranks with the best of the three that the Roadsiders have bestowed upon it during the period of their existence; first in the old, abandoned shoe heel factory and more recently in the more capacious and less train-ridden "old red barn."

The play is dragged out of the moth balls from time to time as a pure lark for those on both sides of the footlights. Its story of villainous perfidy, parental forgiveness, cold-blooded slaughter and final retribution is one that this generation finds it impossible to accept too seriously. It is not a work that might judiciously be relied upon to make or unmake any new or old "stars." Last night's performance enlisted the services of several members of the cast that started this creaking antique on its amazing course of local popularity.

Eugene Kressin made the Inverness-caped and top-hatted William Corder, author of all the play's dirty work, a fine figure of Mephistophelean evil and Hugh M. Smythe dogged his tracks valiantly as the Gypsy nemesis charged with the self-imposed task of seeing to it that the rich Mr. Corder came to no good whatever. Betty Gray was last evening's hapless heroine, who glided about the stage in an ethereal sort of fashion and read her lines with strong emphasis on their poignant misery. The major comedy roles were discreetly allotted to Janet Coon and Fred Haskin, who exhibited an uncurbed and effective vigor in everything they did—and they did much. The supporting players quite caught the spirit of the frolic among the tombstones.

The entr'acte quartet, "She Is More to Be Pitied Than Censured," sung by Miss Coon, Margaret Osterwald and the Messrs. Kressin and Haskin, once more proved the poetic piece de resistance of the five acts. The bill will be continued for a fortnight and should be viewed by all whose hissers are in good working order.

Much Alive Now.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, Sept. 6.

THE DIRECTORS of the swanky Sands Point Club just posted the list of members who will be ousted for nonpoyment of debts incurred there. The list includes some of America's most famous names . . . Joe Penney and John Hertz of automobile and race horse fame are planning with Helen Morgan to restore to her the House of Morgan, the night club in which Harry Kannen sunk $108,000. Miss Morgan expects to invest $12,000 of her own money in the venture . . . Ford will not broadcast the world series ball games this year. The broadcasts, they decided, have been too expensive . . . Dorothy Hall, whose last starring vehicle was in "Behind Red Lights," will get the leading female role in "Of Mice and Men."

• • • •

KEENAN WYNN, son of Ed Wynn, will be in the road company of "Room Service." John Carmody, who will have a 3-minute bit in the same company, was co-author and co-star in "The Oath." The other co-author and co-star of that play was Frank Keenan, Wynn's grandfather . . . Warren Pershing, son of Gen. Pershing, is leaving for a fishing trip with Buck O'Neill, of Police Commissioner Valentin's Cabaret Squad . . . Eddie Dooley will take Paul Douglas's place on that cigarette program . . . Essex House is seeking big-name bandleaders again . . . Mrs. Stella Crater, wife of the missing jurist, has abandoned her contemplated "theatrical" career and has returned to Maine to await the insurance money now due her.

• • • •

A RADIO BROADCAST emanating from a night club near 110th street includes the announcement that "Bert Acosta will come to your table and tell of his experiences in Spain—for whatever you care to give him." . . . Dick Merrill, who will feature in a front-page story soon, will sail on the Normandie, and insists that traveling to Europe by boat is "making it the hard way." Casey Jones is planning to install in Merrill's cabin a Link Trainer—a reproduction of a cockpit used to train pilots in instrument flying.

• • • •

JEROME WEIDMAN, the author of "I Can Get It for You Wholesale," still holds on to his accountancy job. "I keep books by day," he explains, "and at night I write 'em." . . . Quentin Reynolds of Collier's has made a $100 bet with Florist Cleo Black that he wouldn't drink any liquor for ten days, write three stories during that period—and sell them . . . Selinsky, the violinist who won a classical Juilliard scholarship, now is offering a radio program entitled "Strings in Swingtime." . . . Mrs. Cooper Hewitt, now under indictment in California charged with sterilizing her daughter, visited the district attorney's office here in connection with her $10,000 in jewelry held by that female writer.

• • • •

LOU HOLTZ, who is being screen-tested by Dave Selznick, first wanted to know whether his role would be that of Rhett Butlerowitz . . . "Virginia" cost the Rockefellers $185,000 . . . James Ullman's administrative post with the WPA Federal Theater will not be in New York, but in Chicago . . . The Young Communist League is offering a prize for the best poem satirizing Tom Girdler . . . Ethel Barrymore insists she's the least known of her tribe, and keeps introducing herself as "I'm Ethel Barrymore. Y'know—Elaine Barrie's sister-in-law."

• • • •

THE CAPITOL THEATER wanted to display a loveseat in the new lobby. Macy officials informed them that this would be a violation of the bedding law . . . Broadway will get another "new" theater when Orson Welles brings his modern-clothed version of "Julius Caesar" into the Mercury Theater. The Mercury will be the old Comedy Theater in modern dress, too. Martin Gable will have one of the leading roles . . . Anatole Litvak, the film producer who directed "Mayerling," lost his Russian citizenship when he stayed too long in pre-Hitler Germany. Although he's now in Hollywood, Litvak's passport shows him a citizen of Haiti!

• • • •

"HURRAY FOR WHAT," the new Shubert musical, will be a satire on war . . . The New Theater School, sponsored by some of the best brains in America, has sent out circulars announcing its "New Seminary Course in Contemporary Theater." They mean "Seminar." . . . Sam Pokrass, the Zanuck composer, complains at the Brown Derby service, because they give him only a $1,000-a-week hello, and he's making $2,000 a week . . . Maxwell Anderson showed Burgess Meredith how to write that movie story—for which the studios now are bidding.

Behind the Eight Ball Good Location to Be In at Studio

Hollywood, Calif., Sept. 6.—Hollywood is the only place in the world where people are delighted to find themselves behind the eight ball. For the eight ball, in the movie colony, isn't a symbol of bad luck. It's a new type microphone shaped like the spheroid against which pool players propel their cues.

A new lexicon of cinema lingo is rapidly being created in the studios, always a center of rich, juicy Americanese. Thus when Dick Powell, star of Warner Bros. "Varsity Show" recently stepped before the cameras for a scene in his new picture, he didn't blush when someone shouted, "Get that dead duck out of there." A "dead duck," he knew, is a shadow cast by the microphone, necessitating an adjustment of lights.

Nor did Mr. Powell wince when a coarse voice bellowed, "Kill that baby." No one had trundled a squalling infant onto the set. "Baby," in movie parlance, is a spotlight. Neither did the Warner Bros. star leap into gallant action when a director shouted, "Put a silk on that broad and hit her with a rifle." Both "rifles" and "broads" also refer to lights.

Motion picture players new to the studios are constantly puzzled by the argot used on the set. They soon learn, however, that at the cry of "Angels," burly juicers, or electricians, will peer down from the catwalks in the rafters and answer, "yeah." Camera neophytes may lick their lips when someone says, "Bring in that beer keg and some spaghetti." But they soon learn that "beer keg" is another variety of baby spotlight, while "spaghetti" is electric cable.

A "whistle-box" does not refer to a person with an asthmatic condition—it is a choke coil to filter electricity so that it won't whistle when the arcs are turned on. "Barn doors" are flexible mats used on spots to give a narrow beam of illumination. And a "cello" is not a musical instrument, but a wire screen sprayed with cellophane.

When visitors on the set see the camera crew, director, sound men and actors staring at the camera with an expectant look on their faces, the studio workers are waiting for the camera to "bloop." And when the camera "bloops" they start the scene, for that is the signal that camera and sound recording equipment are in synchronization.

"I used to jump when I heard someone shout, 'Pull off that ear,'" said Mr. Powell. "Then I discovered that the 'ear' hangs on the end of the 'broad' to shade the light. The 'ear' is also sometimes referred to as the 'gobo.' It's all a little confusing until you learn the ropes."

A "green man" is not a novice, but the gardener who cares for flowers and shrubbery on an interior or exterior set. And a "best boy" usually is many years past his youth—he is the "gaffer's" assistant. The "gaffer?" He's the chief electrician.

"B. O." does not refer to box-office—it's a symbol scrawled on pieces of equipment which need repairing, and means "bad order." A "jelly box" is not a container for goodies, but a receptacle for diffusers. And the "coca-cola" wagon is not a place to buy bottled good, but the console in which the sound mixer sits.

Truex's Stand-in Is 10 Years Old

Ernest Truex, conscious of the fact that he will never reach the great heights of a Gary Cooper, does boast of one distinction which sets him apart from other actors.

He is the only featured player in motion pictures who needs a 10-year-old boy for a stand-in.

Scores Jailed in Belgrade Before Boy Monarch Reviews Army.

By the United Press.

Belgrade, Sept. 6.—Scores of anti-government Serbs and Slovenes, including a parliamentary leader, were arrested today in a move to prevent an outbreak of religious rioting during a military review marking the fourteenth birthday of Yugoslavia's boy king, Peter II.

Because of the tense situation in Belgrade over the attempts of Premier Milan Stoyadinovich's government to conclude a concordat with the Roman Catholic Church the young monarch was taken to his mother's castle in Bled.

Heavy police cordons surrounded the prince regent as he took the salute of the Yugoslav troops, motorized division and five air squadrons.

Police and troops searched all trains going toward Belgrade. When a member of the anti-government movement was found he was told "The government considers it a duty to watch your safety, which, under the present circumstances, can only be assured by one-day arrest."

After the suspects were in jails in and around Belgrade the review began. Special religious services for the boy king followed throughout the country.

King Peter, who was proclaimed monarch on October 9, 1934, after the assassination of his father, Alexander I, attended services at Bled with his mother and younger brothers.

Wheat Supply Held Ample for World's Needs

U. S., Exporter for First Time in 3 Years, May Ship 200,000,000 Bus.

New York, Sept. 6.—The present outlook is that the wheat crop in the United States this year will be the largest since 1931, amounting to 890,000,000 bushels as against 626,000,000 bushels last year. This country should thus be in a position to export about 200,000,000 bushels during the current season after being an importer of wheat for the last three years, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute today.

Canada's 1937 wheat crop has been damaged and her exportable surplus for the coming season will probably not exceed 60,000,000 bushels as compared with actual experts of 198,000,000 bushels during the past season. This decrease, however, will be more than offset by the surplus in the United States and the two countries together should have 260,000,000 bushels for export, or considerably more than last year.

Wheat crops in western Europe promise to exceed the 1936 harvest and, consequently, world import requirements during the coming season will probably be in the vicinity of 500,000,000 bushels, or 100,000,000 bushels less than last season. Argentina, Australia, the Danubian countries and Russia will be able to provide more than enough wheat to meet that part of the world's import requirements which the United States and Canada cannot supply.

Argentine Surplus.

While it is too early in the season to determine exactly the exportable surplus of the Southern Hemisphere where the crops come to harvest at the end of the calendar year, Argentina's surplus may be tentatively placed at 130,000,000 bushels and Australia's surplus at 80,000,000, a total of 210,000,000 bushels. It is estimated that the Danubian countries will be able to export 72,000,000 bushels. Thus, the United States, Canada, Argentina, Australia and the Danubian countries will have a combined exportable surplus of 540,000,000 bushels to meet the world's import requirements of 500,000,000 bushels.

In addition, it is expected that Russia will have a considerable amount of wheat for export. According to a recent estimate, Russia's crop this year will amount to 1,150,000,000 bushels, the largest crop on record and 40 per cent greater than the 1936 harvest. It is possible that Russia will be in a position to export from 75,000,000 to 100,000,000 bushels during the current season.

A. G. E. Revenues 4 Times Decade Ago

New York, Sept. 6.—The annual report of Associated Gas & Electric Corporation, issued today, shows that over the last ten years expansion of services and acquisition of properties have increased operating revenues fourfold, from $28,063,026 to $115,810,346. However, operating expenses and taxes increased almost five times, and this, plus a substantial increase in provision for retirements, retarded the gain in operating income. This last item was $10,913,855 in 1926, and grew to $34,945,174 in 1936. The balance after charges for 1936 was $5,931,527.

Electric output increased 12.1 per cent during the year and gas send-out 8 per cent. Much of the increase of $22,594,629 recorded in operating revenues in 1936, a gain of 24.2 per cent came from greater electric revenues. These, at $92,767,745, were $19,576,814 higher than in the year before.

Foreign Markets.

London, Sept. 6 (AP).—A more cheerful tone prevailed in the stock market today but business was restricted due to the celebration of Rosh Hashonah and Labor Day holiday in the United States. The Far Eastern situation caused some nervousness and Japanese bonds sold lower. Investment stocks and oil shares were supported. Gold-mining issues started well, but, together with industrials and transatlantic securities, lost part of their early improvement. The closing note was steady.

Paris, Sept. 6 (AP).—The bourse began the week calmly under the influence of favorable conditions and reflecting the quiet recovery in Wall street Saturday. Traders were also encouraged by the summoning of the Mediterranean conference. A majority of shares held firm, but the volume was small, closing quiet with prices mixed.

Cotton Prices Hold Steady At Liverpool

By the Associated Press.

Liverpool, Sept. 6.—Cotton, no sales; spot, quiet; prices, unchanged; quotations in pence: American, strict good middling, 6.33; good middling, 6.03; strict middling, 5.78; middling, 5.48; strict low middling, 5.23; low middling, 4.73; strict good ordinary, 4.23; good ordinary, 3.83. Futures closed quiet and steady.

Closing prices: October, 5.27; December, 5.29; January, 5.32; March, 5.37; May, 5.42; July, 5.46.

After an easy start, wheat futures improved late today to close about steady. Early selling was induced by a variety of factors. Trade sources cited recent disappointing behavior of the American market, fair rains in Australia and Argentina, a bearish private estimate of the Australian crop, an increase in shipments to the United Kingdom, and the heavier bounty on Rumanian exports. The late improvement followed the Argentine market and was aided by short covering.

Hudson August Sales Largest Since 1929

New York, Sept. 6.—Sales of Hudson and Hudson Terraplane cars for August totaled 10,177 units. The best figure for that month since 1929. Sales for August, 1936, were 8,372 cars. The gain for August of this year over last is 21.5 per cent. These figures are reported by W. R. Tracy, vice president in charge of sales of the Hudson Motor Car Co.

"Not only have we just had the best August in eight years, but our sales have shown a steady increase during each of the three past weeks," reports Mr. Tracy. "Sales for the last week of the month were greater than for any week since the seven-day period ended July 3.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Sept. 6.

THERE will probably be shown soon, in your home town, a movie called "Mayerling," a French Nero-film production starring Charles Boyer and Danielle Darrieux. Apart from the romantic tug Boyer exercises over a tremendous woman movie audience, you will be delighted with little Danielle, a new 21-year-old find for the American screen. Universal Pictures have just signed her up for five years, and unless she is hopelessly misdirected and cast in the worst turkeys ever slapped together, you will become a victim to her charms. She is beautiful; she is young; she has everything Marlene Dietrich has, and can act besides.

ALICE HUGHES.

This "Mayerling" picture gave me a strange turn. It projected a third angle to the far from forgotten Windsor-Simpson romance. "Mayerling" is one of the deluge of pictures bound to come, where the problem is "shall he renounce the kingdom?" If he chooses the kingdom, all the youth in the world will cry that he has thrown down love for a paltry fortune. If he chooses the girl, the older generation will condemn him for allowing himself to be beguiled from the path of duty and allegiance to his country.

"Mayerling," based on the unhappy story of Prince Rudolph, former Hapsburg heir of Emperor Franz Josef of Austria, offers a third way out. Both the prince and his beloved die suicidally, because of the frustration of their romance and their inability to survive without each other. I couldn't help drawing the analogy; had the Duke of Windsor shot himself—as many princes and paupers do for love—he would have gone down in history as a romantic idol. Statues might have been erected to him because, rather than default from the line of duty, he chose to die. In a word, dead, he would be a hero; alive, he is criticized, banished, abhorred and demoted. What price heroism? Death?

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Winifred Dunn breezed through town, telling the rest of us envious scribes how in Hollywood she has a noiseless typewriter with luminous keys. If she has a brilliant idea in the middle of the night, she doesn't have to grope for a pencil and a scrap of paper, but just clicks it out on the bright, silent little mill at the bedside. Her maid is instructed, along with the glass of water on the night table, always to put a sheet of paper in the typewriter.

Sophie Gimbel, the store magnate's wife, sat opposite me at a luncheon for Lucien Lelong the other noon, and took plenty of kidding from everyone on account of her hat. It reminded someone of a huge seashell, and made Mrs. Gimbel look as if she were about to take off. But, as she pointed out, women's hats are probably the truest manifestation of this age. Has there ever been a crazier time? And have hats ever been madder?

An interesting girl from Dallas, Tex., flew into my life over a dish of lemonade in one of those ice-cooled cafes which are New York's solution of the dog-day problem. Gail North is her name, and she's an accomplished stylist, besides being a radio commentator on women's affairs. Pale-faced, interesting, with a long, loose-flowing bob worn under a tall, black hat, Gail fitted into the New York scene as if she had lived here all her life—except for her Southern accent. She's the sister of C. R. Smith, president of American Airlines, which employs my home-town girl friend, Pat O'Malley, whom everyone takes to be a man.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

ALL HER LIFE Anna Lee has wanted a pretty bedroom. And never got it. In the old days at home there was no money to spare what with the three younger children still in school and the house needing this for the roof and that for the porch. Then when Anna Lee married, the babies came thick and fast for the first few years, and Anna Lee's room was usually a cross between baby ward and first-aid station.

But eventually her littlest one trotted off to school one golden autumn morning. And Robert came home there was no money to spare, in his pocket. So Anna Lee breathed a big sigh, cried a tear or two for the babies who were trying their wings, and began to think about that dream room. Of course, through the years she'd changed her mind a dozen times as to just what she did want. But always it was going to be a misty tranquil room that would be balm to a lady harassed with the thousand-and-one details of making a pleasant home.

Now that room is actually coming to life. It is just as serene and lovely as she'd always dreamed, even though it is very modern in colorings. The new furniture they bought is bleached mahogany in Adam design, and Anna Lee has the walls painted deep old delft blue with a pale off-pink ceiling. A light beige self-patterned rug was her choice for the floor while she used a pale off-pink ninon at the windows. A monk's cloth in the same blue as that used for the walls makes for a bedspread, and the dressing table bench has a top of the same fabric. Beige frames and mats for the pictures and some extra cushions add their accent, while lamps and small accessories are in pale pink porcelain.

Glamour Girl of 1900 and Two Modern Costumes She Has Inspired

Two Eras Held Similar in Two Paris Expositions, Marriages of Wilhelmina and Juliana as Styles Come Back.

By Ethel Ehlen

The Post Fashion Editor.

THE 1900 INFLUENCE, which is the theme running through the entire fall and winter collections, is not just a fad, but a definite style trend which is destined to be one of the most important fashion influences in history. Why is this, and what is the background which brings 1900 back so vividly into the style picture at this particular time?

Because 1900 was one of the most dramatic years in American history, in regard to color, silhouette, personalities of society, theater, politics and sports, it has been a constant inspiration to designers. It is particularly important this year and will not be a mere fashion whim because of the parallels in 1900 and 1937.

The two Paris expositions (1900-1937); the marriages of Queen Wilhelmina, in 1900, and Princess Juliana, 1937; the abdication of Edward VIII in 1937, and of Crown Prince of Austria, 1900; the renewed interest in automobile racing by socialites this year, (they also raced in 1900); the return of flowers interpreted in jewels in 1937, which were the rage in 1900.

Famous Persons of 1900.

Since we will be wearing modernized prototypes of the clothes of 1900, it is interesting to know who some of the famous persons were at that time, and what events interested them and affected their lives.

Lillian Russell, who is acclaimed by the current designers as the most glamorous woman in American history, was an outstanding actress of the turn of the century. Likewise Lily Langtry, who gave a concert at Sherry's in aid of the hospital ship Maine, was the toast of two continents. Noted in the social events of the day was a reception for Jenny Lind in honor of her return to this country.

Also in the 1937 repetition of an age of luxury and lavish entertaining is a repetition of a Shakespearean revival: Bernhardt in 1900 and Eva LeGallienne, Gielgud and Howard in 1937. Famous firsts of the "mauve decade" include the first princess dress brought to America by Mrs. Oliver Harriman, the first operation for appendicitis, the first Panama hats put on the market for general wear, the first woman to have an automobile license, the first automobile and bicycle show in New York, Queen Victoria wearing first white mourning at a garden party.

Outstanding sporting events of 1900 included—the first road race in the United States; "Kid" McCoy's victory over Peter Haver in a prize fight; Olympic Games in Paris at the Exposition. In political events in 1900—William McKinley was President of the United States; first half of year dominated by Boer War and last half, the Boxer Rebellion; Roosevelt's Rough Riders were much in the limelight; Philippines declared United States territory; the Dreyfus case in Paris; much talk about woman suffrage, with Susan B. Anthony trying to raise money for the cause.

In the realm of social activities in 1900, the opera and theater were of tremendous interest, with private dinner parties and lavish entertainment in famous hotels forming a background for beautiful women in luxurious clothes and jewels. Of particular interest at this time were the operas — Romeo and Juliette, Tannhauser, Lohengrin, Aida. And among the outstanding personalties of the stage in the turn of the century were Maude Adams, in "The Little Minister;" Mrs. Langtry, in "Hearts Are Trumps;" Anna Held, Cissie Loftus, Julia Marlowe, Weber and Fields, E. H. Sothern, Richard Mansfield, Sarah Bernhardt, in "L'Aiglon;" Maxine Elliott.

Mauve Makes Comeback.

The silhouette had begun at this time (1900), to take on a beautifully molded line with fullness below the knees, a slender waist, high bustline, and slim torso. The same ideas are being exploited for the last word in silhouettes for 1937-1938. A huge pompadour of carefully groomed hair gave sharp distinction to the feature lines; current coiffure styles feature the high hair styling. Jewelry was used in 1900, in a highly decorative way; it has returned to the current fashion scene as one of the most important of accessories, for both daytime and evening.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Life of the 'Wild' Girl Not a Bed of Roses, Say Two Contributors Who Profess to Know.

COLUMNIST'S NOTE: Comment on J. F. D.'s question, "Does it pay the modern girl to be good?" which was raised in this column August 27, continues to pour in to this department. Today, two young women who have "had their fling" offer advice to J. F. D., 22-year-old Washington teacher, concerning her theory that the girls who lower their moral standards get all the attention while the good ones are left at home waiting.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: When the argument about morals of the youth of today began, my first impulse was to write in and side with the others against you. But since then certain things have occurred in my own experience that have led me to change my views.

I would like to tell you something of my own experience. It will be excruciatingly embarrassing because my own actions have not been as they should, but perhaps it will help clear up the question. Suffice it to say, that I did put up with a good deal that my own conscience and sense of discretion rebelled against—and I came out with a perfectly vile taste in my mouth that probably will remain with me the rest of my life.

Well, a short time ago a very good friend of mine, an older man who knew the crowd I went with and who had had the advantage of years of experience, stood me up on my back heels and literally raised hell with me. I was told that if I didn't do something about my conduct pretty soon I was going straight into the gutter. Of course this hit me right in the face because all the time I had been blaming everything on the boys and berating myself only for slight weakness of character.

He made me feel so cheap I wanted to crawl. He said, "You don't have to put up with it, you know. All you have to do is to stick your chin in the air and convey the impression that the boy has plenty of nerve thinking he can violate the sanctity of your person. The only thing that really makes a difference is your own self-evaluation. If you put yourself on a pedestal, the boys will, too. But if you assume intimacy with even one boy—it is bound in almost every case to get around—boys will begin considering you a push-over. And it IS easier after the first time, no matter what you say."

* * * *

I sat there and took it. I knew perfectly well he was absolutely right. It was just what I needed—someone to bolster up my self-respect by telling me I had too much on the ball to think I had to give sexual satisfaction in return for popularity. Because I'd been suffering under an inferiority complex—as almost everyone does—I didn't value myself highly enough.

* * * *

And I've paid for it. I'm having a tough time right now. I've recently met a boy, one in a million, so to speak, whose morals are above reproach. I'm crazy about him and he won't come near me because he has heard rumors about me, and he is very particular about the persons he associates with. It's enough to ruin my self-respect, but I'm not going to let it. I'm going to win that boy if it kills me. At least I have one thing in my favor, my conduct so far as he is concerned has been only the best. Well, if he does getting married. She is subject to all sorts of dangers; she is miserable and humiliated about it all; she fears being found out; she fears no man will want to marry her; she fears for her reputation—there are so many fears other than that of pregnancy.

* * * *

She has gotten harder and has lost that fresh wholesome look. She fears she will look like the kind of girl who is "easy" and that in another few years she will be left as a jaded example. Of all the men who have professed to love her, not one has yet asked her to marry him!

* * * *

A year out of college and dates mean more drunken parties. Oh, yes, she will always have lots of dates. There are married men, there are men whose sweethearts are away on vacation and they "wanta good time," and there are the philanderers who try out another girl as often as possible.

* * * *

She decides she will be different. And soon, in many cases, she meets a fine, decent, upright type of man. With a twang of that long-denied conscience she says "yes" to his proposal of marriage. But after marriage things do not go smoothly. She has known so many men intimately, she is likely to become tired of one. She fears having children, knowing the pitfalls that confront youth. If she has them, she guards them carefully and worries over fears that may not be imaginary.

* * * *

Many times she does not stay married. A divorcee has a most terrible time. I should know. But we won't go into that. It is still a more depressing picture.

* * * *

This is the other side. So isn't J. F. D. rather lucky? I should advise her to quit worrying over her problem and be glad she has no greater one to worry about. There are so many women in Washington and men have been so spoilt that they can pick and choose. If they are not ready to marry they will have a good time with the wild girls. And it is to be admired that they don't attempt to mix their women—by that I mean try to make the good girl conform to wild ways. Better by far to leave such a girl at home until a man can present himself and say, "I've had my fling now and I'm ready to settle down with a woman I can trust."

* * * *

Let me say to J. F. D. that I'm sure she'll have some fine man say just that at a very near date—and how glad she'll be that she choose the right road and not the road with all the bumps that leads NOWHERE.

MRS. (NOT MIS) INFORMED.

fall, so much the better. If he doesn't—it's only what I deserve.

HOPEFUL.

The Other Side.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: J. F. D. sees only one side of the question—what she has missed. Let me give the other side, that of girls who, as she says, don't value virginity. Poor misguided little females! Usually at an early age they want to make a sorority and, of course, be popular with the boys.

* * * *

The kids at 15 don't know the score; they paint like a barn, learn the latest dance steps, try to speak with vulgarity, convey the idea they are good sports and follow the crowd. If they are shocked that things are not like Mamma and Papa said, they do not admit it, and soon they are "necking," drinking and smoking. Do they get a lot of dates? Naturally.

* * * *

And then, nine out of ten (surprising but true) of these girls lose their virginity at around 16 or 17 years of age. In rare cases, the coming of another life causes a "shotgun" marriage or disgrace. However, in the majority of cases there are no obvious results and the girl goes on, either to work or to college.

* * * *

At college—week-end parties, fraternity and sorority dances. By this time the girl who has had experience has stopped speaking to the funny-looking boy who got her drunk several years before and took what she should have valued. Another man follows and in time he tells her "nothing doing" about

Your Figure, Madame!

September Is Month to Begin Fruit Diet for Reducing; Light Menus Necessary After Careless Eating on Summer Vacations.

By Ida Jean Kain.

EVERYBODY from Maine to California goes in for slimming in September. It's practically a national fast time! Business takes stock in January, but women take stock of their figures in the fall.

Well and good! Light menus are just what you need after a summer of careless eating, but let the faddy reducing diets alone! In slimming down to improve your appearance you must protect your health and beauty. Of course, you want the scales to respond in a hurry, and you can safely lose from 3 to 5 pounds the first week on a regime of fruits and vegetables—and feel better. This diet, which is to be followed for two to three days, is a tonic to your system. Eve's famous diet is an altogether healthful and effective starting point for a figure program.

Free From Fatty Foods.

The fruits and vegetable menus are free from starch, fat and protein. Don't worry; you'll lose weight! The first three days are the hardest—you'll be hungry on less than 800 calories a day. These unsatisfied hunger pangs, however, enable you to shrink your stomach and to get your appetite under control.

After this first week of weight loss, your maximum reduction should be 2 pounds per week. To control weight loss the daily calorie allowance is adjusted to individual energy needs, and the limit is two-thirds your actual calorie requirement. For the other one-third you draw on stored calories. You should lose from 1 to 2 pounds per week.

On the first month the maximum loss for any reducer is 10 pounds, and in many cases a more moderate loss of 6 to 8 pounds is advised. Because of water exchange, this initial weight loss is usually greater than at any subsequent time. During the second month no reducer should lose more than 8 pounds, and during the third month 6 pounds is the maximum.

Fruit Regime Easier.

The fruit regime makes it easier to get started on your slimming program. A loss of several pounds at the beginning makes dieting worth the effort.

Before adopting the menus, however, ask your doctor whether a loss of 10 pounds will benefit your health. Maybe you shouldn't go in for streamlining. Health is far more important to you than what happens to be the fashion in measurements for fall, 1937. Follow your doctor's advice.

SUGGESTED FRUIT AND VEGETABLE REGIME (to be followed two or three consecutive days)—

Today's HEALTH TALK

By

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Causes of Eye-Strain.

Good vision does not necessarily mean healthy eyes. This is true in childhood. In middle age the converse may be said to be true—poor vision, at least for reading, goes with perfectly normal eyes.

The child in school is asked to read a chart and he reads the 20-20 line, which is the accepted standard for normal vision. Yet he may have to strain his eyes to achieve this normal vision. Sooner or later with the continual strain of achieving normal vision in school, he will begin to have symptoms—of headaches, or nervousness, or inattention.

The three optical faults which induce eyestrain are far-sightedness, near-sightedness and astigmatism.

Far-sightedness does not mean good vision in the distance. The eyes have to strain even when looking at a distance. Normal eyes focus distant objects with complete relaxation. Only when doing close work do they have to focus; but focusing in a normal eye is not the same as strain.

In far-sighted eyes the image falls too far back even when the eyes are looking at a distance, and the retina does not receive a clear-cut image until the focusing muscle starts working and brings the image upon the retina. That means the facusing muscle never gets a rest.

This results in constant strain and leads to nervous symptoms of that strain. Such a child was one aged 8 who at home was disobedient, irritable and nervous. At school he was indifferent to his work, backward, and his teacher called him lazy. No one for a while suspected his eyes might be the cause of the trouble, because he could always read the smallest line on the test chart, until finally one doctor suggested a "thorough" examination. This means a complete check of the physical health of the eyes and a determination of the total optical error.

These far-sighted children have just such a strain upon the focusing muscle that it is hypertrophied and much stronger than normal, so it is generally agreed among competent oculists that it must be put at rest with medicine before the exact amount of optical error can be measured.

One of the best textbooks on the eye says, "In every case of hyperopia (far-sightedness) occurring in children and young adults, the accommodation should be paralyzed and the total error estimated so as to serve as a prescription for glasses."

When this was done to the child whose case we have recounted, and proper glasses prescribed for him, his improvement was remarkable. He wasn't really lazy or indifferent, but you can't expect a young fellow to be full of pep when some of his muscles are always on a strain.

Table Decorations Drawn From Seas

Paris (U.P.).—The nautical idea has spread from ship models to other phases of home decoration and even supper tables are shown with the sea as inspiration for red, white and blue settings for informal suppers.

Society Scans Calendar As Rain Halts Activities

By Hope Ridings Miller.
The Post Society Editor.

Laboring on Labor Day has its points—especially when the weather is better inside than out and tennis and golf tournaments at half a dozen major resorts have to be postponed because of rain. In other words, yesterday was a good time to stay in and take stock of the social calendar and figure out what some of the major events of the coming season are to be—what with an unprecedented number of weddings this month, both in and out of the city; with a dozen or so debutantes getting ready to make their bows before Christmas; and with some outstanding foreign dignitaries making plans to visit the Capital in October.

Latest among the latter group to announce intention of visiting the United States is the Norwegian Minister of Foreign Affairs, Dr. Halvdan Koht, who plans to come here directly after he attends the Assembly of the League of Nations at Geneva. According to announcemnt made recently by the Norwegian Foreign Office, Dr. Koht is sure to be here "if conditions in Norway or in the world permit."

He will come—if he does come—the latter part of October, leaving on the Stavangerfjord from Oslo, October 16, and arriving in New York October 26. After a brief visit in New York, he will speed on to the Capital to be received by President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell Hull. While the Norwegian Legation here has not yet received official information that Dr. Koht is to come, there is likelihood that he will visit at the Legation and that he will be guest of honor at a number of social functions while he is here.

Is Noted Historian As Well as Statesman

There is a possibility, also, that the foreign minister will speak at two or three American universities and that he will appear before an open meeting of the Norwegian-American Chamber of Commerce and the American Scandinavian Foundation.

One of the most noted historians in Europe, as well as an outstanding statesman, Dr. Koht was educated at universities in Oslo, Copenhagen and Leipzig, and also holds a degree from the Sorbonne. Before he appeared on the political horizon in his homeland, he was a lecturer in history, and later a professor at the University of Oslo.

Dr. Koht first won national attention as a leader in Norwegian Labor Party, to which he still belongs. In 1923, he was made president of the International Committee of Historical Sciences.

In addition to laurels he has achieved as historian and statesman, the Foreign Minister has also won wide acclaim as an author. Of the dozen books he has written, four are on the life and work of Henrik Ibsen. His two-volume biography of the famous Scandinavian playwright attracted favorable attention from critics both in Europe and in this country.

Dr. Koht's visit to the United States is therefore keenly anticipated in literary and social as well as diplomatic circles.

AMONG THE Washingtonians entertaining at Labor Day functions at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., were Judge and Mrs. D. Lawrence Groner, of Washington, who gave a dinner last evening at the Greenbrier in honor of their guests, Supreme Court Justice Owen J. Roberts and Mrs. Roberts, who arrived in White Sulphur Springs on Saturday. On Sunday evening the Groners also entertained at dinner for Justice and Mrs. Roberts and Col. and Mrs. Arthur W. Littlefield.

Mrs. Campbell and their son, Colin Campbell, jr., will sail later to join Commander Campbell in Trinidad. For the past few months Commander Campbell has been stationed in Norfolk.

NOW ON A month's motor trip through the North, Maj. and Mrs. James Roundlett Finley, who were married in the chapel at Fort Myer, Va., on September 1 at 8 o'clock in the evening, will live in Norfolk, Va., where Maj. Finley is senior instructor of the Organized Reserves.

ABOUT THE TOWN

With Dudley Harmon.

Bluemont summer residents will begin to come down from "the hills" within the next week or two to occupy their Washington homes for the winter.

Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom and their daughter, Miss Vera Bloom, will start the exodus Friday, when they expect to hit the trail for their Spanish house on Columbia road. For once the Blooms spent a quiet week-end; this is the first time all summer when they haven't had a houseful of guests.

Mr. and Mrs. John Caswell will close their home in Bluemont Monday and, with their children, will return to Washington. Mr. and Mrs. William Chapin Huntington have set September 25 as a likely date for moving back into their house at 1906 Twenty-third street.

The late Frank G. Carpenter, well-known travel author and father of Mrs. Huntington, was one of the Bluemont pioneers. He built two homes there many years ago, before it began to be fashionable. One of them, a beautiful gray stone structure perched on top of a mountain, was occupied for two summers by former Italian Ambassador Rosso. Mrs. Huntington's brother added a swimming pool a few years ago which, unfortunately, doesn't work at all.

Mr. and Mrs. Huntington are spending this summer at Journey's End, their house on the other side of the mountain overlooking the valley and Berryville in the distance. It is approached by a long drive through thick green woods, and there always is a cooling breeze on the broad veranda, which runs around three sides of the house.

Mrs. Huntington will motor to New York Sunday to meet her daughter, Joanna, who is returning from a summer in Europe. Miss Joanna expects to enter Smith College next year. Her mother is both an alumna and a trustee of the institution and was at one time president of the alumnae association.

Mrs. W. W. Galbraith, wife of Capt. Galbraith, had a discouraging experience recently. She bought one of those expensive and trick cameras to take on her recent trip around the world, and spent weeks mastering its complicated mechanism.

She took hundreds of pictures in the Orient, where she and Capt. Galbraith spent several months, and they were all in color too. But for some reason she was unable to get them developed there, so she shipped them back home. The results were eagerly awaited, but alas, there was some defect in the camera, and not one of the pictures turned out.

Capt. and Mrs. Galbraith will return later in the month from Fisher's Island, where they have a summer home. Friends of the former's son, George Galbraith, will be glad to learn that he is out of the hospital after a couple of weeks there with an eye infection.

Wallaces in Colorado Until Time for School

Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, and her daughter, Miss Jean Wallace, who are lingering at their camp near Colorado Springs until cool weather has come to stay, will return to Washington in time for Jean to enter school.

Secretary Wallace is at present in Washington. His sister, Mme. Per Mijkman, will leave shortly for Helsingfors, Finland, where her husband has been transferred for duty at the Swedish Legation. The Wijkmans spent the week-end in Virginia.

Coming to Capital.

Mrs. James M. Thompson, of New Orleans, the former Genevieve Clark, sister of Senator Bennett Champ Clark, is expected in Washington this week for an extended visit. She will come here from Summit Point, W. Va., where she is now the guest of her mother-in-law, Mrs. A. P. Thomson, and the latter's daughters.

Betrothal Told.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis C. Freeny, of Country Club Hills, Va., announce the engagement of their niece, Miss Betty Haralson, to Charles Robinson Eason, jr., of Boston, Ga., and Washington, D. C. The wedding will take place November 14.

Store Hours: 9:30 A. M. to 5:45 P. M. Including Saturdays.

in our sale of new winter cloth coats (which we are continuing until September 15th), our insistence upon only the best qualities of both materials and furs is very apparent. Then, too, we have individualized these garments by our distinctive style details, and altogether they are the most likely coats to interest those of good taste and discrimination. The values are very impressive and it is decidedly to your advantage to call before the sale ends.

Opportunity HouseShows Gain in Year

The Post Club Editor.

Miss Bessie Baker, director of Opportunity House, 915 New Jersey avenue, looks forward to having there some day a settlement house with as broad facilities for service as have those which have served other neighbors over a long period of years in other sections of Washington. Started a year ago in May by the Opportunity for Service Club, of which Arthur Clarendon Smith is now president, the settlement house has already made its influence felt in the community.

Miss Baker, who has been director since last November, first became interested in social welfare work as a teacher in the schools of Mount Vernon, N. Y., where she was assigned as instructor of special classes of foreign-born students in the elementary grades. She taught the children lessons in home making with much success. Later, she went to Chicago, her former home, and there was a resident worker at Commons Neighborhood House and was also associated with the Hull House group leaders.

Aid Foreign Born Mothers.

At Opportunity House are many foreign-born women, some of whom find life more difficult because they speak so little English. It means they lose hold on their older children who know the language, learn American ways and find nothing to interest them at home. For both mothers and children of such families Opportunity House offers a place of recreation and advancement. There is a mothers' club which meets on Monday evenings. The members repair and remodel used clothing which is later distributed where it is needed. Speakers are invited to talk to them. Next week Mrs. Grace S. Kizer, of the Good Will Industries, will tell of the Good Will workshops and stores. Miss Baker also plans to start an English class for those who desire to learn the language.

There is a boys' art class sponsored by Charles Battly, of the WPA; a play group for pre-school children on Thursday mornings, where they learn wholesome health habits, are taken for walks and taught safety lessons in crossing the streets, in addition to having games. Thursday afternoon there is a dressmaking class for intermediate girls; Friday morning a boys' play group in Troy Hall (a barn behind the old house which may some day be converted into a little theater), and Friday afternoon the Neighborhood Girls' Club, composed of girls up to 12 years of age.

Girls Learn Lessons in Play.

A dolls' house with six rooms, open in front so the children can stand before it and arrange its furnishings, is being used as a project to teach lessons in homemaking. The children are now sewing curtains for it.

When school opens, Saturday afternoon recreation groups will be resumed, with indoor games for children. On the third Sunday of each month a tea for the sponsor also will be given.

Members of the sponsors' group meet each Tuesday noon throughout the year for luncheon at the house, often bringing guests. Last week Maj. Ernest Brown was present and talked on the work of the Boys Clubs. It is the plan of Miss Baker to have the program each week present a definite phase of welfare work being carried on in Washington.

There should be a public consciousness of the whole plan of social welfare in the city, she says. Persons interested in one proscect, such as Opportunity House, should be well informed on all of the others of similar nature, she believes, in order to give the most intelligent support to the work and to co-ordinate it for the best interests of the entire community.

Among the women active in the Opportunity for Service Club by which the comparatively new settlement house is sponsored are Mrs. E. E. Reinoehl, Mrs. James M. Doran, Mrs. Laura Bogue, Mrs. Irene Berthold, Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, Mrs. Albert Day, Mrs. E. C. Morris, Mrs. Margery Connelly and Mrs. Arthur Clarendon Smith.

Director With Little Visitors at Opportunity House

Miss Bessie Baker, director of Opportunity House, photographed with three of the children of the neighborhood, Koola Anamareros (left), who is holding "Toony," one of the home's two pets; Patsy Hurd and Irene Anamateros, who is more interested in blocks than in kittens. Miss Baker has "Oppy," the other kitten.

Miss Earlene White, president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, will be the speaker of the evening.

Amplifiers will be installed insuring the enjoyment of the varied program in all parts of the auditorium. The massing of the colors of the various patriotic and civic organiaztions will be in charge of Miss Lillian Chenoweth, State vice regent, Daughters of the American Revolution, and Mrs. Earl Brentwood Fuller, State corresponding secretary, Daughters of the American Revolution.

Adams, regent, will partiepate in the ceremonies, after which the representatives of Descendants of '76 Chapter will be guests at lunch and at a regular meeting of the local chapter.

Leaves for California.

Frederick W. Dewart, of the University Club, has resigned his position as Special Assistant to the Attorney General, and has gone to Los Angeles, where he is engaged in the private practice of law.

Tomato Ice.

An ice made of tomato juice is a tasty addition to a meal at which roast beef or fowl are served. Other ices for summer include lime, mint, apricot, lemon, pineapple and lemon.

Advisory Council to Meet.

The next meeting of the advisory council of the U. S. S. Jacob Jones Post of the American Legion will be held at the home of Past Commander Kate K. Briggs, 6616 Thirty-second place, Thursday evening, with Past Commanders Lucille Allen, Mayme Smith and Mary Weide as cohostesses.

Y. W. C. A. Vacation Lodge at Cherrydale Observes Holiday With Hike and Singing

VACATION LODGE, Y. W. C. A. summer residence for businesswomen at Cherrydale, Va., was a cheery place yesterday. Nearly half the residents were away over the holiday, but those who remained at home enjoyed the day at the lodge.

In the morning an energetic group walked to Chain Bridge. It included the Misses Ruth Mulaney, Elsie Bolger, Margaret Carroll, Marion Brown, Alberta Huey, Sue Pritchard and Anne Golden. They returned just in time for luncheon, served on the screened porch which has been used as the dining room all summer. Yesterday's fall weather brought the girls out in coats and sweaters.

During the afternoon they sat about the rustic fireplace in the living room, where a bright fire was burning. Some of the group gathered around the piano, singing familiar songs to Miss Wanda Lee Davis' accompaniment, while others read, crocheted or played ping pong on the porch. In the evening there was more music and some of the girls toasted marshmallows before the fire.

In the group besides the morning hikers were the Misses Marion Lermond, Ruth Stiles, Grace Sexton, Louise Wight, Florence Kerr, Margaret Lawrence, Imo Fonner, May Richards, Orpha Gilbertson, Loretta Partridge, Marjorie Barrows, Joyce Morrison, Beulah Frazier, who are residents of the lodge. The Misses Janie and Lizzie Venable, Sue Pritchard and Anne Golden were guests over the week-end. Miss Charlotte King, hostess at the lodge, was there also.

The summer residents will remain until October and will wind up the season with a dinner at the lodge.

Business Women Open Club Season Tonight

The Business Women's Council will have its first meeting of the fall season tonight in the chapel of Covenant-First Presbyterian Church. A feature of the program will be "Vacation Experiences" recounted by the members.

The meeting will open at 6 o'clock with the current topic period and at 6:45 the Rev. Samuel R. Allison will conduct the devotion service.

In Pennsylvania.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Guggenhem of the Wardman Park Hotel are spending a week at the Hotel Hershey, Hershey, Pa.

English Wig Stands.

The mahogany wig stands which were used in the eighteenth century either for bowls of wig powder or to support the wigs while they were being powdered and curled, are put to quite another purpose today. They make exceedingly attractive stands for growing plants, ivy or cut flowers and add a decorative touch to a room.

Marriage Announced.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Mary E. Farmer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Farmer, of Redland, Md., to Ralph M. Benson, son of Mrs. O. R. Benson, of Rockville, Md. The wedding took place August 26, at Elkton, Md.

Fraternity Has New Fall Plans

ALPHA CHAPTER of Phi Delta Gamma, national fraternity for graduate women, plans an innovation this year. It will have open house at the club rooms of the fraternity, every afternoon during the first week f the fall term, to welcome new students at the graduate school of American University, with which it is connected.

The chapter, of which Mrs. Frederick Grocker is president, will also arrange to have its members meet incoming graduate students, assist them in locating rooms and otherwise make them feel at home in Washington. The plan will extend to all new students of the graduate school without relation to their eligibility for membership in the fraternity.

Phi Delta Gamma has two chapters in Washington, Alpha, and Beta, which is connected with George Washington University and of which Miss Sara Lerch is president. The two have a membership of nearly 80. Their first meetings will be held in about two weeks, although the definite dates have not been announced.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

By Suzanne.

TWO MEMBERS of the Curley Club will be married this week—to each other. They are Margaret Rankin and Thomas Cullinane, who is chairman of the club's auditing committee. They will be married tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock in St. Mary's Catholic Church, Alexandria, with the bride's cousin, the Rev. Thomas Rankin, officiating. Needless to say, as many members of the club as can be away from business at that hour of the morning, will be on hand to extend best wishes.

The bride is a nurse at Georgetown Hospital, and has been a member of the club for two years. She was guest of honor last Monday at a shower given at the home of Miss Mary Connelly.

WASHINGTON is even worse than the tropics when it comes to heat, according to Miss Hettie Hagglund, who is here from Cape Town, South Africa, visiting her cousin, Mrs. G. G. Kirkpatrick, secretary at the Egyptian Legation, and Mr. Kirkpatrick. She has enjoyed Washington despite the weather, and only wished for an extra pair of legs during tiresome but altogether interesting stretches of sightseeing, she says.

This is her first trip to America. She went from Cape Town to Ireland, the home of her mother's people; to Scotland; was in London for the coronation, and went from there to the lakes of Switzerland. She came from England aboard the Queen Mary and Mrs. Kirkpatrick met her when she arrived in New York.

The cousins are both natives of South Africa and went to school together there. Mrs. Kirkpatrick came to Washington in 1929 to take a position as secrtary at the South African Legation. In 1934, following her marriage, she took a similar position at the Egyptian Legation, which she still holds. Miss Hagglund for several years has been in the office of the surveyor general of Cape Province, connected with the computing division. She is a member of the Natural History Club of Cape Town, an rganization of both men and women, including many persons interested in scientific research. In addition to the regular meetings which are addressed by authorities who are there from other countries as well as by local speakers, the club members take excursions into the country, going part way by bus and part on foot.

From Washington Miss Hagglund will go to Massachusetts to visit some of her father's family whom she has never seen. She expects to sail for England from Montreal in two weeks and after a brief stay in London, will embark on her return to Capetown.

THE CONSTITUTION will keep Earlene White busy for a few days, in connection with the celebration of its Sesquicentennial. Thursday of this week she goes to Philadelphia, where the Business and Professional Women's Club has invited her, as national federation president, to address its Constitution banquet. In keeping with the theme of the national federation program for the year, "Our Town's Business," the Philadelphia Club is participating in the city's observance of the formsing and signing of the Constitution there. The celebration in the Constitution's birthplace is continuing all this week, leading up to a climax on Cinstitution Day, September 17.

On that date, Miss White will speak here at Constitution Day program of the D. C. Daughters of the American Revolution at Memorial Continental Hall.

The next night, she will turn from patriotic programs to club business, attending the board meeting of the New Jersey State Federation at Camden. September 20, she will be guest of honor at a district meeting in East Orange, the home city of Mrs. Myra Blakeslee, third vice president of the federation.

From there she goes to New York City for her first conference at the national headquarters since her election as president of the federation, and on September 25, to Schenectady, N. Y., to take part in an overseas broadcast, in which she will carry on a conversation with a business woman in Sidney, Australia.

RUTH SHIPLEY, president of the Quota Club, which will soon be starting its meetings for the season, will have memories of a cool vacation with her when she presides at its opening session. She is on a motor trip through Canada and will not return to the Capital until September 20.

Cloudy Skies Again Peril Antietam Fete

Rep. David Lewis Likens Slavery to Cancer in Address.

Gov. Nice to Attend Rites at Fort Frederick Wednesday.

By Scott Hart.

A Staff Correspondent.

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 6.—Threatening skies—that bugaboo of all outdoor activities—have settled for the second day over Hagerstown where 200 years of history are being commemorated. The threat of rain was the chief concern of this otherwise gay place.

Those who are portraying historical characters in the pageant, "On Wings of Time," moved to the exposition grounds at 1 p. m. with the tenseness of people who are aware they are stealing a march on rain.

The city was all dressed up and things rolled with a ballbearing smoothness on Saturday, the opening day. Then it rained on Sunday. And Sunday was expected to be a highlight day, the time for the Labor Day crowds to start coming in. Everyone agrees that the weather has kept away thousands.

No Letdown in Spirit.

But there has been no letdown in the spirit of the townspeople who are putting on the performances. This is an interesting feature of the observance. There are 1,500 persons in the pageant, the chief attraction. Most of them are employed. They have arranged to get away from work to perform as much as three times a day.

Sharpsburg, like Hagerstown, is dolled up in all manner of bunting, but some think the town has been left by the road. Actually, it has received considerable attention. Hundreds of people have visited it in making the tours of the Antietam battlefield. Anyone interested in the Antietam fighting inevitably would go there to see the village that caught the backwash from the battle.

The village intends to have its own homecoming period in the last two or three days of the general countryside celebration. It will figure prominently, also, in the fourth annual sacred and patriotic concert—a memorial to the two armies—at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon at the Antietam National Cemetery.

Procession of Choirs.

The First Maryland Regiment Band, of Frederick, will play, and the Cumberland Valley choristers, directed by Prof. Charles M. Cassell, will be heard. There will be a processional of vested choirs.

Even under skies that appeared ready to burst, a tremendous crowd was at the exposition grounds this afternoon to hear the address by Representative David J. Lewis, of Maryland. He was billed to speak in the amphitheater, where Senator Tydings opened the celebration Saturday. Many people went there and sat through a program of music by the Hagerstown Municipal Band, expecting momentarily to hear the Congressman.

It soon developed that the Representative was speaking on the pageant grounds instead. Many rushed over there in time to catch his last words.

"Inherited Cancer of Slavery."

The Congressman, accompanied by Mrs. Lewis said, "We inherited, with great advantages from Europe, also the cancer of slavery, which the Civil War answered. Had the Battle of Antietam been lost to the Nation, Mount Vernon would have been on foreign soil to the Northerners; Franklin's Tomb would have been visited by descendants of Jefferson only by a passport. Great problems were met and solved by our ancestors. During the last generation scientists and engineers have solved the oldest of human problems—a way to produce wealth in quantities. Today, it is not the fault of Woodrow Wilson, President Taft, Chief Justice Hughes and the lamented Senator Root that every country in Europe is trembling in its dread of war. Had their counsel prevailed, an institution would have been established in which controversies between nations would have been settled."

At least, with the skies growing hourly more threatening, this was something. For the weather's condition is overshadowing everything and the success of the next few days is entirely dependent on it.

Looking back on the celebration, certain features stand out impressively. The pageant, participated in entirely by amateurs, has been outstanding, it is unanimously agreed. It has been well acted and elaborate.

Exhibits Draw Crowds.

Merchants have done an excellent job of decorating their windows and store fronts. The historical and farm exhibits at the exposition grounds have attracted much attention.

In celebraotion of "All-Maryland Day" Wednesday, Gov. Harry Nice will come to Hagerstown for the dedication of Fort Frederick, built during the French and Indian War, and recently reconstructed by the Civilian Conservation Corps. The ceremonies will be attended by many members of the State Legislature.

After luncheon with the Hagerstown Rotary Club, Gov. Nice will go to the Antietam Battlefield, where he will make another address. In the evening he will be the guest of honor at a colonial ball in the armory.

Crime Curbing Will Feature Lecture Series

Prevention in Homes Is Subject of First Address Oct. 5.

Crime prevention in the home will be one of the subjects of a series of lectures opening at the Wardman Park Theater October 5, under auspices of the Institute of Criminal Science's crime clinic.

The opening lecture will be given by Dr. Ernest R. Groves, research professor of the Institute for Research in Social Science at the University of North Carolina. He will tell that the reaction of a parent to the crying of a child has much to do with the youngster's success or failure in life.

"If society is to combat the problem of crime at its roots it must dig down into the cradle. Parents and teachers must be trained in the significance of the baby's cries before they can hope to 'train' the baby in their own conceptions," he believes.

Methods which will make the problem child react to other people and things will be discussed by Prof. Harvey Zorbaugh, of New York University.

The lecture series, which is part of the regular curriculum of the institute, located at 1741 K street, will be open to the public. The course of 28 lectures will cover the home, school, health and hygiene, penal institutions, cultural problems and community organizations that mold public opinion.

Congress Session Urged to Prevent War 'Incidents'

By the United Press.

The National Council for Prevention of War last night urged a special session of Congress to prevent "an identical accumulation of incidents" in the Oriental conflict as forced this country into the World War in 1917.

The council seeks immediate invocation of the neutrality law against Japan and China.

"If policy in regard to war in the Far East is to be kept in line with the democratically expressed will of the people, an immediate special session of Congress is required," a statement said.

The six organizations which sent the request for a special session were: The Emergency Peace Campaign, World Peaceways, Women's International League, National Council for Prevention of War, Committee on Militarism in Education, Fellowship of Reconciliation.

Automatic Radio Signals Weather In Stratosphere

A flying weather box, equipped with an automatic radio signaling device and with a "hair hydrometer" to measure humidity, plunged from the stratosphere yesterday to land near the home of Rudolph Wolf, 2930 K street southeast.

Wolf reported the instrument was unharmed.

E. C. Crittenden, of the Bureau of Standards, said the instruments are attached to gas-filled balloons. The balloons burst when they reach the stratosphere. By that time recordings have been made on a thermometer, an air pressure gauge and the "hair hydrometer." An automatic radio signals the weather conditions.

Crittenden said that the instruments have proved much less expensive than airplanes in gathering weather information from the stratosphere, even though many of the boxes are broken in plunging to the ground. Their use is still in the experimental stage, he said.

Consumer Strikes Suggested To Curtail Mounting Costs

If Americans want to put up an effective fight against their arch enemy, the high cost of living—they have in their hands a most powerful weapon.

It's the consumer strike, in the opinion of B. E. Montgomery, consumers' counsel director for the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

Although not advocating such strikes, since it is "not up to a Government official to do so," Montgomery feels buyers this fall could help themselves by striking.

"I think they not only could help themselves immediately as consumers, but that if they succeed in putting an end to this alarming steady increase in prices, they probably would be performing a real public service.

"It seems to be a question of whether we are going to spend up our prosperity in a year as we did before, or whether we are going to try to balance our economic system," he declared yesterday.

Buyers' strikes are not exactly new, he points out. Back in 1920 there was a general movement against high retail prices and "overall parades" were staged against clothing costs.

In New York a milk strike is being staged. Effective meat strikes have been worked in Akron and Chicago.

Food prices, Montgomery predicted, "are going to be lower." He thinks they probably have reached the crest of the wave now and that the current good crops will surely bring them down.

William Rodenberg Improves Slightly

Alpena, Mich., Sept. 6 (AP).—Hospital officials reported a slight improvement today in the condition of William A. Rodenberg, 71, Washington attorney and former Illinois Representative and Republican leader.

Rodenberg suffered a head injury last Friday in a fall down stairs when he was stricken with paralysis. He was a guest of former Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, at his Flat Rock Club, 60 miles south of here.

Federal Union Offers Pledge Not to Strike

Green and Lewis Condemned at Illinois Convention.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 6.—The twentieth anniversary convention of the National Federation of Federal Employes, opening its five-day session here today, pledged its 75,000 members solidly to obey the edict of President Roosevelt that there shall be no strikes among Federal Government workers.

The President told the convention in a 400-word message that "militant tactics have no place in the functions of any organization of Government employes," and the 250 delegates answered the national Executive in this way:

"This twentieth jubilee convention pledges anew the allegiance of our organization to the sound basic principles dictated by patriotism and honesty of purpose."

Organization Natural.

Mr. Roosevelt's message said in part:

"The desire of Government employes for fair and adequate pay, reasonable hours of work, safe and suitable working conditions, developments of opportunities for advancement, facilities for fair and impartial consideration and review of grievances, and other objectives of a proper employe relations policy is basically no different from that of employes in private industry. Organization on their part to present their views on such matters is both natural and logical, but meticulous attention should be paid to the special relationships and obligations of public servants to the public itself and to the Government."

Luther C. Steward, of Washington the federation president, in an extemporaneous speech to the convention, asserted such a message as sent by the President could not have been directed to "rump" labor organizations.

"Certainly such a message could not have been directed to the 'rumps,' Greens (William Green president of the American Federation of Labor), subsidized racket with its record both brief and pediculous and the only evidence of consistency which it has ever displayed being that of irresponsibility; certainly not to this most recent manifestation in our field, where certain progeny of the 'rumps' found on the doorstep of the C. I. O. were taken in.

"And then," the Federation president continued, "came the brazen bid for Federal personnel, and to those who might fall there is the inevitable prospect that they will become mere pawns in the hands of outside political labor manipulators of dubious antecedence and with equally dubious objectives."

Condemns Congress.

In his biennial report to the convention, the federation president said that Congress has reached a new all-time low for undermining the merit principle in Federal service, charging that Congress has created new agencies with personnel specifically exempted from the provisions of the Civil Service laws; and materially extended the requirement for Presidential appointment and Senatorial confirmation of positions previously within the appointing power of departmental and agency heads and open for promotion from the ranks.

A number of Washington delegates were appointed to committee positions today including the following:

Tomorrow's session of the convention will be marked by the first committee reports on resolutions offered, an address by Gov. Henry Horner of Illinois and the possible appearance of Robert L. Johnson, president of the National Civil Service Reform League.

Jews Continue Observance of Rosh Hashanah

Celebration of New Year Ends Tonight; 16,000 at Services.

Washington's 16,000 Jewish residents crowded all synagogues in the city yesterday for services observing Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish New Year.

For members of Orthodox synagogues the observance continues until sundown today, and the special services of yesterday will be carried on through the day. Members of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, only reform group in the Capital, however, ended their services at noon yesterday.

The holiday differs from the Christian New Year in that it is wholly religious. Members of the faith spend Rosh Hoshanah period in meditation and spiritual preparation for the year to come.

Rabbis yesterday called upon their congregations not only to respect, during the holiday, the traditional rites that have been followed for thousands of years, but also to use the ten-day period of penitence just ahead as a time for contemplation. The days of penitence lead to another holiday, the Day of Atonement.

"Fulfilling the Covenant."

Rabbi J. T. Loeb, of Southeast Congregation, in his morning sermon declared that despite hardships, the Jews were witnessing a fulfillment of the Covenant handed the Israelites many centuries ago. With the new year, he said, comes a new chapter in which are to be written new acts of progress—if members of the faith take advantage of their opportunities.

The persecution of Jews in Europe, and problems before the race were subjects of other sermons. Efforts to reclaim Palestine for the Jews, and the dissension there among the Arabs, Jews and the British of land partitioning were also discussed in the holiday talks.

President Sends Greetings.

Greetings to American Jewry were extended by both President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell Hull. Jews of America were called upon to dedicate the new year holiday "to the great masses of our people, whose hope for the new year and the new life is bound up in Palestine."

President Roosevelt's message read:

"I highly appreciate the significance of Rosh Hashanah and desire to express my earnest hope that the new year then beginning will be marked by increasing prosperity and happiness, not only for our Jewish fellow citizens but for all people of our common country."

Twin Spending-Tax Bills Cochran's Aim

By the Associated Press.

Representative Cochran (Democrat), Missouri, chairman of the Government reorganization committee in the House, declared yesterday that whenever Congress votes to spend money it also should find the necessary revenue.

The Administration, he said, is spending too much money "aside from relief appropriations."

He suggested that after a legislative committee approves an appropriation bill, it be sent to the Ways and eMans Committee for another title "which must provide a method by which the money will be raised."

Seven Injured in 1936 At Virginia Coke Ovens

By the Associated Press.

The Bureau of Mines reported today only seven injuries resulting in temporary disability occurred during 458,399 man-hours of employment on coke ovens in Virginia in 1936.

Temporary disability is defined by the bureau as injuries disabling an employe for more than the remainder of the day of the accident.

The report showed four companies in the State operate 423 beehive ovens, employing 295 men during 1936. The seven accidents gave the State a rate of 15.27 accidents per 1,000,000 man-hours work.

These Redskin Pros Are Plenty Good

By Shirley Povich.

Somehow, I get the idea that Washington is slow to appreciate this team of Redskins that George P. Marshall has brought to the Capital as a franchise holder in the National Professional League. There is a tendency to treat the thing as an experiment in football whose financial future is more or less in doubt.

POVICH.

I'd say it is not pro football that is on trial with Washington fans. I'd say that it is Washington which is on trial with pro football. Because this is no run-of-the-mine football team that Marshall has installed in the Capital. It is the team that last season was the champion of the league's Eastern division and second in league rating only to the champion Green Bay Packers.

Lucky, that's what Washington fans are. It is no adventure in football that Marshall is making at the expense of the local customers. He is not foisting anything on 'em. He is giving 'em a ready-made team with more than its share of the pro league's stars—a team that right now is second choice to win the league championship, and you're wrong as sin if you think he's getting by cheaply.

* * * *

Washington, in its first season in professional football, has virtually been endowed with a pennant contender. Every other city in the league, with the exception of Green Bay, would probably gladly exchange squads with Washington. And Marshall's 1937 outfit is improved over that team which won the Eastern championship for Boston last season.

* * * *

No simpleton is this Marshall who pulled out of Boston to bring his Redskins to Washington despite the fact that his new scene of operations lacked half the population he could draw from in Boston. Viewed circumspectly, it was a smart move by Marshall for a variety of reasons.

* * * *

Firstly, here his Redskins would not have to compete for patronage with a slew of ranking college teams such as Boston harbored—Harvard, Holy Cross and Boston College—and Dartmouth and Yale, which are within easy traveling distance for Boston fans. And Boston is a town that is mildly nuts over college football.

* * * *

In Washington Marshall will encounter no such opposition. There are a few traditional, ivy-covered football rivalries in these parts to take the edge off pro football. And otherwise Washington is peculiarly susceptible to the attractiveness of pro football, because the great run of fans here owe no allegiance to local colleges. The man on the street is rarely a graduate of a local college, and thus is a potential customer for the pros.

* * * *

George Washington U. is the college that figures to be most affected by the invasion of the football pros. In recent years G. W. U. had built up a tremendous following among the men in the street, who cottoned to the Colonials because they staged the best shows—scheduled the best opposition. It is this type of fan whom the Redskins are likely to win over.

* * * *

Marshall was somewhat surprised, himself, when he discovered last fall that he was thinking seriously of transferring his Eastern champions from Boston to Washington. For weeks he had made a bluff of it in an attempt to arouse greater interest in the Redskins in Boston, but when that little game failed darned if Marshall didn't begin to like the idea of bringing his outfit to Washington.

* * * *

It was, perhaps more than anything else, a show that Marshall staged for Washington football writers in New York that led directly to his transfer of the Redskins here. That was the occasion of last December's Eastern championship battle with the New York Giants at the Polo Grounds, when the Washington writers were Marshall's guests.

* * * *

There, is was discovered that all that had been said about professional football being coldly commercial was a gross libel. No college football team ever surrendered to its emotions before a game any more honestly and completely than did those Redskins while Coach Ray Flaherty was giving 'em their orders to go out and beat the Giants.

* * * *

Hard-boiled bruisers who had graduated from college perhaps ten years before, guys who looked as if they couldn't work up a tear at a funeral wept and promised Flaherty they'd win. The clink of coin was far from that dressing room. These weren't mercenaries playing for a price, but swell athletes who'd have broken a leg to win that ball game.

* * * *

Well, we guys wrote very pretty pieces about it all nad tried to tell Washington fans what they were missing, and Marshall liked the stuff we wrote and began to get ideas, and finally said he'd do it, and here you are.

100 Police Guard Park And O'Hara

By the Associated Press.

Providence, R. I., Sept. 6.—A 48-hour controversy over opening of the books of Walter E. O'Hara's Narragansett Race Track to State auditors ended late today with an announcement the track management had capitulated to the demand of the State racing commission.

Twice during the day Pawtucket police, massed about the doors of the office of O'Hara, whose removal of managing director of the track had been ordered by State officials, and balked efforts of State auditors to enter the plant and survey the Narraganett Racing Association's books.

Rumors that the National Guard would be called out by Gov. Robert E. Quinn, who backed Francis J. Kiernan, chairman of the State racing commission, in his demand for an immediate audit, circulated through Providence and Pawtucket, where the track is situated, before the management capitulated.

Attorney General John P. Hartigan said Raymond J. McMahon, general counsel for the racing association, agreed to the audit during a conference late today. Auditors will start their examination as soon as the holiday racing program ends, Hartigan said.

Shortly before Hartigan's announcement, Gov. Quinn had threatened to close the track unless the audit was allowed. Stating that he would back up Kiernan, the Governor said:

"It is up to Kiernan to take appropriate action. If his orders are disobeyed the track probably will be closed and the books taken anyway."

O'Hara has remained publicly silent, except for one statement, since his removal as managing director of the rich track was ordered by the racing commission early Saturday, following a charge that he had tried to "intimidate" a track steward. At that time he asserted such a charge was "ridiculous," and declared the commission and its "superiors" were playing politics. Gov. Quinn contended no politics was involved.

Quinn and O'Hara are on opposite sides of the political fence within the Democratic Party in Rhode Island. O'Hara is friendly with a strong Pawtucket Democratic faction.

Observers counted between 50 and 100 policemen from Pawtucket, which adjoins Providence and holds the track within its limits, when the State auditors went to the Narragansett plant this afternoon.

While a holiday crowd gathered to watch the races, Raymond J. McMahon, as spokesman for the Narraganett Racing Association's stockholders, told the examiners they could not see the books without a court order. He added an audit could be ordered without the consent of the stockholders, which would take about ten days to obtain.

Kiernan rushed to the track. When McMahon again refused to produce the books, Kiernan said the audit would go forward anyway after the close of today's racing.

245,000 Watched Games in Majors

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—Crowds totaling approximately 245,000 saw eight big league doubleheaders today, with the New York Giants drawing the biggest group of fans, 46,177, for their double bill with the Phillies, at the Polo Grounds. At Cleveland 48,000 saw the Indians play Chicago in morning and afternoon games, with 20,000 at the morning game and 28,000 in the afternoon.

The largest American League crowd was at Philadelhia, where the Yanks drew 38,183. The junior circuit outdrew the senior 138,183 to 105,871.

Yanks Take Two Games From Macks

New Yorkers Increase Lead to 13; Win by 6-3 and 2-1.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Sept. 6. — The league-leading New York Yankees moved nearer the American League pennant today by brushing aside the Athletics twice in a holiday double-header by scores of 6 to 3 and 2 to 1.

Despite threatening and cold weather a crowd of 38,183 fans watched the proceedings.

The Yanks clinched the first game with a five-run rally in the fourth inning to break a 1-1 knot. Crosetti's single brought two runs home and Joe DiMaggio smashed his fortieth homer of the year, sending three more tallies across the plate.

Lee Ross was yanked in favor of Lynn Nelson after this frame and held the league-leaders in check the rest of the way.

Paul Andrews gained the nod over Edgar Smith in a pitching duel in the nightcap. The Yanks snapped a 1-1 tie in the sixth inning, scoring the winning run on Dickey's double and Powell's infield single. Andrews held the Macks to three hits.

Cubs Buy Logan From Indianapolis

Chicago, Sept. 6 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs, who "blew" a seven-game lead in the National League in less than a month, today purchased Robert Logan, a southpaw, from Indianapolis, in the American Association, in an attempt to bolster the pitching staff. Logan will report Tuesday.

Logan, 27, won 16 games and lost 9 for the sixth place Indianapolis team in 1936. He had previous big league trials with Brooklyn and Detroit. Cub officials said his 1937 record was not available.

Giants Take 2 Games From Phils; Cubs Divide Double Bill With Reds

New Yorks Win Opener, 6-2, and Final, 9-3; 40,000 Present.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 6.—The Giants solidified their grip on first place in the National League today as they swept to double victory over the Philadelphia Phillies, 6 to 2, and 9 to 3 before 46,177 delighted fans. The victories pushed the Giants' lead to three full games over the Chicago Cubs, who split with Cincinnati, and sent them on their last road trip with a home stand record of 12 victories against 3 defeats.

The rejuvenated Hal Schumacher and Cli Melton divided the pitching honors. Schumacher shut out the Phils until the eighth inning of the second game, when John Moore poked a homer with two on. Melton pitched consitently to win his fifteenth of the year in the opener.

Col. Terry's operatives supplied plenty of hitting thunder too. John McCarthy slapped one in each game and Catcher Harry Danning got one in the first inning of the nightcap with two aboard, to climax a five-run rally for the victors.

Beat Grissom on 1 Hit in Second Fray, 2 to 1; Lose Opener, 7-3.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 6.—Lefty Lee Grissom, Cincinnati's star freshman, held the slumping Cubs to one hit today, but that lone blow—a pop fly double by Phil Cavarretta at the start of the eighth inning—led to a two-run "rally" that beat him, 2 to 1, in the second game of a holiday double-header before 29,694.

The game ended a losing streak for the Chicagoans that had reached five straight when Paul Derringer beat them, 7 to 3, in the opener. The erstwhile league leaders, who only a little more than a month ago were seven games to the good, dropped to three full games behind the first-place Giants because of the first-game loss. The Giants won twice from Philadelphia.

Grissom, who has won 12 games for the cellar Reds, had the better of a pitchers' duel with Curt Davis going into the home eighth of the nightcap. As a result of Hub Walker's single that scored Billy Myers from Second, where a hit and passed ball had placed him in the third inning, he led Davis, 1 to 0.

Cavarretta, first up in the eighth, sent a looping fly that fell just in front of Walker in centerfield and was good for two bases, as Walker, charging in fast in an effort to catch the ball, overran it. Cavarretta held second while Lew Riggs fumbled Bill Jurges' grounder, but beat Grissom's throw to third base to fill the bases on Davis' sacrifice. Cavarretta scored on a wild pitch and Jurges, who moved up on the heave, dashed across with the winning run on Augie Galan's fly to Kiki Cuyler.

Louis to 'Retire' After Next Fight

St. Louis, Sept. 6 (AP).—Joe Louis, the Brown Bomber, left the impression here today he expects to retire from the ring soon—"probably next year after the Schmeling fight."

While he stopped talk of the future there, he was willing to admit he wasn't anxious to meet the German, adding, "I'm thinking of that defeat he handed me. Anyhow, I'm going to have a long rest before Max and I get together next June."

The Detroit Negro was here with a softball team he exhibits and with which he likes to play.

Steele and Sledge On Nagurski Card

Steele is to meet Bill Sledge, the former Rice College gridder.

From day to day Impresario Turner will reveal to his constituents the rest of his supporting card, a card which, along with "Boxoffice" Nagurski, he hopes will put life back into the District rassling scene.

Indians, Chisox Split Games by 2-1 Scores

Feller Gives 4 Hits, Fans 9 and Wins With Triple After Lyons Tames Cleveland in Opening Contest.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Sept. 6.—The Indians and White Sox broke even in a pair of brilliant pitching battles before a crowd of 28,000 at the big lake front stadium here today, each game being decided by a 2-to-1 score.

Ted Lyons allowed the Indians only five hits as he registered his eleventh victory in the morning game. It was his fourth in a row and the fourth time he has beaten Cleveland this season without a defeat.

Bob Feller was even more impressive in the afternoon. He allowed the Sox only four hits, all singles, three of which were bunched in the fourth inning to produce the lone Chicago run. From the fourth to the finish only one Sox batter reached first base.

Feller fanned eight men in the first four innings, but didn't chalk up his ninth strikeout until he shot a fast ball past Mervyn Connors, the rookie third baseman, to end the game.

Collegians Score Over Bears, 6-0

Dallas, Sept. 6 (AP).—The Collegians made it two straight 1937 football victories over the Pros when the All-Stars whipped the Chicago Bears, 6 to 0, in the Cotton Bowl here tonight.

Cocky little Art Guepe of Marquette bustled all over a muddy field to lead the Collegians before 20,000 fans.

A heavy downpour two hours before game time, following two days of showers, hindered the Stars' vaunted passer, Slingin' Sam Baugh of Texas Christian and slowed both teams' running attacks.

Guepe electrified the crowd with a 24-yard touchdown sprint early in the second period—just four minutes after he had raced 38 yards over the soft turf only to be hauled down from behind on the Bears' 3-yard line by Ray Nolting.

In the first and fourth quarters the Collegians also drove within striking distance, but field goal attempts failed.

Notre Dame Sets Record In Gold Cup

Mendelsohn's Boat Beats Italian Invader for Race Honors.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Sept. 6.—A flat, white-hulled hydroplane called the Notre Dame roared over the Detroit River speedboat course today at a speed that at times went well above the 70-mile-an-hour mark to repel a foreign attempt to capture the famous old Gold Cup.

The Notre Dame, owned by Herbert Mendelsohn, of Detroit, and piloted by Clell Perri, shattered a variety of records to win over a field that dwindled under the gruelling grind from ten to three boats.

The craft broke the old 30-mile heat record of 60.866 miles an hour made by George Reis, of Lake George, N. Y., in his El Lagarto in 1933 by roaring around the course at a speed of 68.645 miles an hour. Then she established a new race record of 63.675 for the 90 miles, bettering the old mark made in 1933 by Horace Dodge's Delphine at 60.28 miles an hour.

Second honors in the race went to the Italian boat, Alagi, dogged by hard luck in all three heats.

Under the complex system of scoring, Notre Dame was awarded 1,100 points, plus 800 bonus for the fastest lap and the race record; Alagi got 869, and Vic Kliesrath's Hotsy Totsy, which developed trouble and did not finish the third heat within the time limit, got 300.

The other event on today's program was a "225" division I Class race for hydroplanes, which Dr. Robert Hermann, of Cincinnati, captured in three straight heats of 27 miles each. Miss Quebec, of Quebec City, Canada, won second place on point showing, and Shadow II, of Toronto, was third. In making a clean sweep of this event Dr. Hermann drove his black-hulled craft at 62.251, 62.034 and 60.668 miles an hour.

The latter disposed of SEA DOVE for command, opening up a commanding advantage, and fought it out willingly when challenged and just failed to last. PRINCE DEAN, away fast, lacked speed to keep pace early, but came with good courage in the last three furlongs.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FREE, $17.20, $10.20, $6.50; MAKE IT, $12.80, $6.40; HOT CAKE, $3.70.

FREE was slow to settle into his best stride and, back among the trailers until leaving the backstretch, moved up stoutly on the outside when called upon and, responding gamely to hard urging as the stride quickened, wore down MAKE IT, restrained for the first 5 furlongs, wore the early pacemaker down for the command, drew clear and, although holding on gamely, was unable to cope with the closing bid of the winner. HOT CAKE, a trailer early, moved up boldly rounding the far turn only to race into a pocket and had to be taken up sharply. He recovered gamely and finished with good energy.

DAILY DOUBLE—MELODY LANE AND FREE—PAID $110.60.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:45. Off at 3:47½. Winner, Medway Stable's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MASKED GAL, $7.70, $4.70, $3.00; GALON BOY, $10.60, $4.70; NARISE, $3.10.

MASKED GAL, quickest to begin, disputed the command with GALON BOY in the run down the backstretch, fought it out courageously after getting to the front after rounding the far turn and held away to the close. GALON BOY continued stubbornly after losing command and fought it out right down the finishing line. NARISE, well placed throughout, held on stubbornly although unable to reach the first two.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,100. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:16. Off at 4:19½. Winner, H. and H. Stock Farm's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLACK NOSE, $15.10, $7.70, $6.00; SAN MARINO, disqualified; TOP TAX, $5.70, $4.30; RUFFY, $10.00.

BLACK NOSE was kept within striking distance of the early leaders from the start, responded gamely to urging in the stretch and was along in the closing strides. SAN MARINO moved through on the inside nearing the far turn, disposed of MISS PRUDENCE for the lead, met determined opposition from TOP TAX and Dickey struck TOP TAX with his whip straightening out in the stretch, for which he was disqualified. TOP TAX moved up on the outside in the run down the backstretch, held on gamely to the finish.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. The Waltham Purse, $1,200. For 3-year-olds; allowances. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 4:51. Off at 4:56. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:47 3-5, 1:12 2-5, 1:37 3-5, 1:44 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TINDER BOX, $8.40, $3.80, $3.30; OLD NASSAU, $6.40, $4.50; GOOD CATCH, $4.70.

TINDER BOX was rated along back of the pace established by OLD NASSAU, wore the latter down when called upon and drew out steadily under a mild hand ride. OLD NASSAU drew into a good lead straightening out on the backstretch, made a game bid to go along with the winner when challenged, but was not good enough although continuing willingly to the end. GOOD CATCH, well placed and reserved early, was unable to reach the leaders when called upon.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. The What Cheer Handicap; $5,000 added. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:26. Off at 5:33. Winner, H. C. McGehee's b. f. (4), by Bright Knight—Fair Phantom. Trained by E. B. McGehee. Value to winner, $4,350; second, $1,000; third, $500; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 3-5, 0:46 3-5, 1:11 2-5, 1:36, 1:49 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FAIR KNIGHTESS, $4.20, $3.00, $2.80; SNARK, $3.70, $3.20; SPARTA, $3.70.

FAIR KNIGHTESS assumed command in the opening furlong, drew clear straightening out on the backstretch, was steadied along under slight restraint, met determined bid from SNARK approaching the half-mile ground, drew clear again and, hard ridden through the stretch, had enough in reserve to hold away to the close. SNARK, in nearest pursuit of the winner for the greater part of the trip, finished wearing down the winner. Longden lodged a claim of foul against the winner that was disallowed. SPARTA, well placed and restrained early, moved upon the inside in the stretch, made a game bid nearing the furlong pole, but was unable to close any ground.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 6:02. Off at 6:06½. Winner, Miss L. C. Two-dollar mutuels paid—RAMS HEAD, $20.90, $9.00, $5.30; PEEDEEQUE, $7.50, $4.30; MISS MARLBORO, $3.40.

RAMS HEAD improved his position gradually in the run down the backstretch, was taken to the outside rounding the far turn, moved up fast and, taking command when reaching the stretch, had enough left to hold PEEDEEQUE safe. The latter improved his position steadily and closed with good energy in the stretch run. MISS MARLBORO worked her way up steadily, moved up menacingly approaching the furlong pole, but was unable to close any ground thereafter.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 6:35. Off at 6:47½. Winner, J. L. Two-dollar mutuels paid—OPOCA, $9.40, $4.30, $3.40; LUGANO, $4.40, $3.50; ATCINES, $7.50.

OPOCA went to the front in the run to the first turn, drew into a good lead, was rated along in front, met determined opposition from ATCINES, drew out again and was never seriously threatened. LUGANO began working his way up in the last half mile after racing far back early and came with good energy through the stretch run. ATCINES forced the pace of the winner and held on willingly to the close.

"STELLA DALLAS"

CHAPTER 2

Stella Dallas, a millhand's daughter, is separated from her husband, Stephen, when his firm transfers him to New York and she determines to remain in Milhampton with her daughter, Laurel. On a rare visit home, Stephen realizes that his child is being brought up in an ugly atmosphere. Ed Munn, Stella's flashy friend, and some of his pals are in the midst of a carousal. Disgusted, Stephen proposes to take Laurel away only to discover that Stella is roused to tigress-like fury—she loves Laurel more fiercely than anything in the world.

When Laurel grows up, Stephen sends her to a fashionable boarding school in Boston. Laurel gets to know and love her father when she visits him in New York on vacations from school. It is obvious that her parents are permanently separated. Stella, caring only for her child, has slipped into a rut of personal sloth and carelessness.

It is while he is on a shopping tour to buy Laurel a birthday gift that Stephen accidentally meets his old sweetheart, Helen Morrison. Helen, now the mother of three boys, is a widow and the old love between the two is instantly rekindled. At home, Stella also is feverishly preparing for Laurel's birthday. She is secretly making her a new gown and planning an elaborate party. Laurel discovers the dress and is trying it on when Ed Munn, ill-mannered and coarse, causes an ugly scene. Laurel, however, blinded by devotion, is totally unaware of Stella's cheapness.

Bob Burns Says—

One hot summer day, my cousin Hod was sittin' in the shade of a tree watchin' me spade up my garden. I was just about to keel over when my cousin Hod spoke up and says, "You look awfully hot and dry. If I had a nickel, I'd run down to the drug store and get you a root beer." I pulled a dime out of my pocket and says, "Well, here take this over to the drug store and bring me one and get yourself one while you're there."

Plane Ignited Half-Hr. After Crash Killing 2

3 Maryland Eyewitnesses Inject New Mystery Into Accident.

By the Associated Press.

Friendsville, Md., Sept. 6.—Witnesses of a Navy plane crash injected a new mystery into the accident today in reporting the plane did not catch fire until half an hour after it hit the ground and killed two Naval Reserve officers.

Lieut. Comdr. Henry C. Clayton, of Roslyn, N. Y., and Lieut. Herbert Schaeffer, of Forest Hills, Long Island, were killed in the crash last night.

Three eyewitnesses said they removed the bodies from the wreckage, and left the scene to find help. When they returned some 20 minutes later, they said, the ship was a mass of flames. It previously had shown no indication of catching fire.

A Navy salvage crew late today took the remains of the plane to Philadelphia, where an investigation was to be made.

Avoiding a Losing Grand Slam.

Not until the advent of asking bids did players have an even chance against that big bad wolf of Contract known as "Duplication of Values." We all remember, I am sure, the wailing and muttering that filled the air when it was discovered —too late, alas!— that we had contracted for a slam, only to find partner with the wrong Ace, or a K-Q-J that was worth precisely nothing.

The holders of the North-South hands shown below thanked their stars that through the aid of an asking bid they were able to avoid a disastrous grand slam contract.

North.
Spades—Q 8 4 2
Hearts—9 7
Diamonds—K Q J 10
Clubs—A K 8

West.
Spades—10 9
Hearts—K 5 4
Diamonds—9 4 3
Clubs—10 7 5 3 2

East.
Spades—7 6
Hearts—J 8 3
Diamonds—7 6 5 2
Clubs—Q 9 6 4

South.
Spades—A K J 5 3
Hearts—A Q 10 6 2
Diamonds—A 8
Clubs—J

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♢	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	6 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

When South heard his partner open the bidding with a diamond he felt like whooping with joy, and when his own jump takeout of two spades was promptly raised the situation looked even rosier. Had the partnership not been using asking bids, South would have been an arrant coward to have stopped short of a grand slam, since he could see clearly that, at the worst, success would depend on the heart finesse. With no device available to determine whether this finesse would be necessary, a grand slam would be the best bid and the one, I think, that every expert player would make.

But there is a great difference between unavoidable risks and risks that can be investigated in advance. South saw that he would not need to gamble over the heart situation as he could get precise information on the subject. Hence, his four heart asking bid. When North was unable to give a positive answer to this bid, it became a virtual certainty that a grand slam depended on a finesse. Obviously, North must have had the club Ace for his opening bid, and his failure to respond positively to the asking bid must, therefore, be due to the absence of second-round heart control. South might, of course, figure on North's holding a five-card diamond suit which would produce three discards, but in that event there would be no assurance that North had both the Ace and King of clubs.

The point is that if North and South actually could see each other's hand they would not contract for a grand slam, and the asking bid in this situation was tantamount to double-dummy bidding.

Ordinary pajamas were never intended for active sleep. And that is what scientists have discovered sleep is; you twist, bend, and squirm, dozens of times a night. That calls for unhindered movement, for free-squirming. PLEETWAY gives it, gives better, more comfortable sleep through its 3-Point comfort design. It clothes without confining; its full-swing under-arm pleat, its full-fashioned balloon seat, its full-breathing waistband with side-tab adjustments—all contribute to sound, unfettered night's rest.
